Chicago's Queer Idea
An Aluminum Palace
Smith's Money Recipe
One Brick, $25,000

— By Arthur Brisbane —

Walking along Chicago's lake front, from the Michigan Central station to the Blackstone, you are fascinated, as usual, by the pawing horse upon which John A. Logan, perched on his high mound, rides nowhere.

On the edge of the slope a man lies, asleep in the rising sun, a pile of newspapers for his bed. Chicago has signs in parks reading, "Newly seeded, please keep off." But, if it is NOT newly seeded, you may walk, lie, play or sleep anywhere. They have a strange idea here, that the earth, parks included, belongs to the people.

Milwaukee is interesting, because there, gangsters shoot you rarely. The eccentric local police have no partnerships with crime. When something is "pulled off" the police have no share in the profits. For that reason, things are not pulled off. Other big cities, tired of being shot up and shot down, might inquire into that.

Secretary Mellon, who was the Aluminum King, and wore several other American crowns before he gave up business for the Treasury, should see, in Milwaukee, the aluminum palace of science, just built by L. R. Smith, head of A. O. Smith Co. The big building is of polished aluminum, without and within, most beautiful in every detail. The furniture is made of aluminum. You touch a big arm chair and it rolls away, light as a powder puff.

That building, best advertisement the Aluminum company ever had, is devoted to pure science. It is a great series of laboratories in which 600 scientists devote their time and knowledge to problems that affect industry and decide profit or loss. Chemists, physicists, engineers, metallurgists, and 17 patent lawyers are included in the "brains department" of A. O. Smith and Co.

L. R. Smith is the industrial genius who made all the great steel companies junk and abandon their pipe mills, costing tens of millions, and build new ones in imitation of Smith after he showed that he could make, in a week, more miles of pipe than they all together could make in a month, and at half the price.

On one shipment of oil pipe to Texas, Smith paid a freight bill of one million two hundred thousand dollars.

Quite a business, and he is about to reveal another surprise for the pipe makers that will please them no more than the original surprise. That is another story.

The automatic mechanism that makes automobile frames in the Smith factory is the most remarkable industrial performance in this country. Row upon row of iron monsters advance, bite holes in metal with sharp teeth, insert rivets and fasten them, then retire, to come forward again and bite the metal in another place.

A thousand devils, at their silly antiquated tricks, would be dull compared with that phalanx of steel-biting dragons. For $7.50, material and labor included, Smith makes a frame that once cost more than $100.

Do you ask, "Of what possible use can 600 scientists be to a mechanical industry," L. R. Smith will tell you. His scientific building, its surface nearly all glass, has window panes nine feet wide, thirteen feet high. The lowest bid to set those giant sheets of one-inch plate glass in the window frames was $35,000.

One of the scientists made vacuum cups to hold and move the glass sheets, nine men did all the work in a short time, and it cost $5000, instead of $35,000.

Also glaziers came by fast train from all over the United States to see how it was done. That will interest L. J. Horowitz, chief glazier, who was in Europe at the time.

L. R. Smith says the way to make money is simple.

"Find something in universal demand that is being made by old-fashioned people whom easy prosperity has made indifferent. Take their business out of the rut, do it yourself at half the price and at a good profit.

"Thus you benefit the country and earn money to experiment in other directions, which is the only thing worth while."

LABOR JOINS TO BATTLE M'DONALD

"Dictator" at First Meeting Tries to Save Empire From Ruin

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—Ramsay MacDonald became, in a manner of speaking, a British dictator today as he presided over the first cabinet meeting of the new non-partisan government which is preparing to cut $600,000,000 from the budget expenditures.

Charged by the king with forming the emergency government, the prime minister holds his post of power as an individual, but not as the representative of organized labor, which is now marshalling solid opposition ot its former leader.

The program which he laid out for his ministers today is not much different from that which he and Chancellor Philip Snowden tried to force through the Labor government, and the platform of the new ministry is virtually the same as that on which the Labor government split and fell.

TO AVOID TAX BOOST

It is proposed that the greater part of the money needed to balance the budget will be made available by reducing expenses instead of by increasing taxes.

Probably the largest economy will be made by cutting the weekly unemployment dole by 10 per cent.

This means that a jobless man and his wife who now receive about $6.25 a week would get only about $5.65. The allowance of two shillings a week (about 50 cents) for each child of such a couple is not to be reduced.

CAN'T PITCH HAY IN LOCKUP

If Rufus Pratt, Norwell farmer, had stuck to his hay pitching today instead of traipsing off to town in his aged flivver he might still be enjoying liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

But he's in the lockup down to Weymouth charged with robbing summer camps in the Lakewood section. And the hay isn't half pitched.

Seems the Weymouth constables have been looking for Rufus two years or more with a warrant. They probably wouldn't have got him today only the radiator of Rufus' flivver sprung a leak on the way to town and began a-steaming.

He pulled her into a Weymouth filling station for repairs and standing there was Officer Bill Dwyer of the Weymouth police looking right at him.

"Ain't you Rufe Pratt?" says Bill.

"That's jest who I be," says Rufe, matter-of-fact like.

"Well, you're jest the fella we been a-lookin' for the last two years," says Bill. And off they drove to the lock-up.

Stearns Grandson's Yacht Disabled

The Miscoe, a 45-foot power yacht owned by Francis Stearns Prescott of Grafton, grandson of Frank W. Stearns of Boston, was towed into Narragansett during the night by the Coast Guard after engine trouble had developed at sea.

Reairs were completed today and the yacht left for Providence. It was believed that Stearns and his wife, the former Dorothy Buckingham of Worcester, were aboard.

Skowhegan, Me., Aug. 26 (AP)—The fire department and volunteers searched today for Miss Lillian Eastern, about 35 years old, of London, England, and Allston, Mass., who left the home of Dr. Frank S. Bigelow where she was being treated for a stomach trouble.

PLANE EXCEEDS 270-MILE SPEED

With propeller changes, Hall is confident of exceeding 275 miles.

Ambulance in Death Race to Save Baby

Over the road, in a dramatic race against death, an ambulance sped today from Providence to Children's Hospital in Boston, with two internes keeping alive the veritable breath of life in an 11-month-old Providence boy.

As the fast-moving ambulance, with motorcycle police of two states clearing the way ahead with shrieking sirens, the two perspiring internes from Providence Hospital gave continual manual respiration to the child, a sufferer from infantile paralysis.

For two hours previously, in Providence Hospital, the internes also had given little Richard Fogarty of 1684 Broad st., Providence, manual respiration while hospital authorities sought an institution whose artificial respirator was not employed.

As the ambulance pulled away, hospital telephone operators in Providence were busy notifying cities and towns along the route, and the police were ready to speed the vehicle through each community.

Policemen were waiting at street and highway intersections, and at the Rhode Island-Massachusette line. Massachusetts state troopers on motorcycles relieved the Rhode Island troopers.

The race against death took slightly more than an hour, and the baby, on arrival, was still alive, although declared to be in a serious condition.

'TOY GUN MAN' IS SEIZED IN GEM THEFT

South Boston Suspect Caught After Chase in Roxbury Streets

A lone diamond thief gambled and lost today in an attempt to steal two diamond rings from the Suffolk Loan Co. in Washington st., Roxbury, his short flight ending in capture by two policemen.

The thief, who gave his name as John Carlton, 36 of M st., South Boston, entered the loan company shortly before noon and asked to be shown some diamond rings.

SEIZES DIAMONDS

As the man picked over the tray he pulled what the manager and clerk thought to be a real revolver from his pocket, seized two diamond rings and darted from the shop, slamming the door and snapping a padlock in place outside.

Abraham Diamond, manager of the shop, took a revolver and with Philip Michaelson, a clerk, raced in pursuit, only to find the door locked. Seizing a monkey wrench, Diamond smashed the window, then clipped the padlock off with a pair of wire cutters, and the two men took up the chase.

The pursuers' cries and the sight of the chase drew a crowd in the wake, and all was excitement in Washington st. as a police car, with Sergt. Barthlomew Winn and Special Officer Herbert F. Jones came cruising along.

Sergt. Winn and Special Officer Jones, with better speed to be made on foot, left the police car and headed the pursuers. They were almost up to the fleeing man when he turned into a doorway in Northampton st. and there was trapped.

HAD TOY PISTOL

According to police, the captive admitted the theft, stating:

Police reported that Carlson stripped off his coat and threw it away during the chase, and that the coat later was picked up and found to have a toy revolver in one pocket.

PICNIC BUSES CRASH; 3 HURT

Two buses in a string of 50, bound on the annual city of Revere outing, crashed in Lynn Marsh rd., Lynn, today, and three persons were injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael McCarthy of 35 Beach st., Revere, and Mrs. Rose Di Napoli of 31 Reservoir ave., Revere, who was carrying a 10-months-old baby in her arms, were shaken up and bruised, but the baby escaped.

They were taken to their homes by motorists and treated by their family doctors.

The 50 buses, carrying approximately 2500 persons, employes of the city and members of their families, were in a long cavalcade with police motorcycle escort.

They were headed for Pleasant Pond, Wenham, and in one of the forward buses was Mayor Andrew A. Casassa and other city officials.

The buses were only slightly damaged.

Threatened lay-off of 200 employes of the Boston Elevated loomed today with the announcement that 59 male collectors on the rapid transit division were slated to lose their jobs within the next four weeks.

At the "L" offices it was announced that 22 men acting temporarily as collectors would be laid off for a time on September 4 and about 25 additional on September 18. Return of employes now on vacation will result in the temporary lay-off of 12 more collectors on October 2.

Guards now working on the rapid transit lines will fill 18 of the 22

Several men, composing the crew of the vessel, shoved off in a speedboat and escaped.

3 SUSPECTS IN KILLING BACK FOR INQUIRY

Three Greater Boston youths were arrested today in Providence and brought to Boston for questioning in connection with the murder of Alexander Baxter, 70, Roxbury storekeeper.

While Boston officers were bringing them over the road from Providence, a guard was assigned to protect Hedda Christensen, 15, witness of the holdup and shooting in Baxter's store at Hillside and Wait sts., on Parker Hill.

The stolen automobile used by the killers was found today in Oak Grove ter., Roxbury, and identified by the girl and another witness, John J. Cahill of Wothington st., Roxbury.

ARRESTED ON BUS ROUTE

Five headquarters inspectors were assigned to the case by Deputy Supt. James McDevitt, who ordered them to work night and day until they caught the slayers—and to be ready to shoot to kill if necessary.

The youths arrested in North Main st., Providence, near the Pawtucket line, were believed to have left Boston about midnight on a bus bound for New York, hiding under the tarpaulin covering the baggage on top of the vehicle.

Patrolman John English of division 17, West Roxbury, saw three men under the canvas and notified headquarters. Buses were searched at Providence, but without result. Then the youths were found on the bus route through that city.

They gave their names as Robert LaRochelli, 19, of Thingvalla ave., Cambridge; Anthony DeVito, 21 of Holworthy st., Cambridge, and Ambrose Morris, 20, of Fairview ave., Belmont.

Taken to Providence police headquarters, they were quizzed by Inspector Joseph Armstrong and later by Chief Inspector John J. Maguire, and then held under guard for Boston police. No charges were placed against them.

Revise Anti-Trust Laws

The negotiations looking toward the merger of four independent oil companies represent an attempt to bring order out of chaos in the demoralized industry.

No thoughtless political prejudice against mere bigness in business should stand in the way of socially useful integration.

If the conception runs counter to the existing anti-trust laws, then the anti-trust laws SHOULD BE MODIFIED AND MODERNIZED.

This should be done with the proper legal safeguards to insure against predatory practices and the exploitation of the consuming public.

The depression, with its human accompaniment of widespread unemployment, points to the folly of blind and anarchic competition running riot.

It points to the need of change in the government of business.

Heretofore, executives have been hampered in their efforts to eliminate economic waste by artificial barriers in connection with OBSOLETE clauses of the anti-trust act.

Economic conditions have radically changed since the Sherman act was passed in 1890, and Congress must take cognizance of the new setting.

The Webb-Pomerene act permits combinations for the export trade which would be held illegal in connection with domestic business. Experience under the Webb-Pomerene act indicates that BUSINESS MEN CAN BE TRUSTED TO CONFER AMONG THEMSELVES ABOUT MATTERS OF MUTUAL INTEREST.

As Gilbert H. Montague, member of the New York Bar, recently pointed out before the Institute of Politics at Williamstown:

> "Certainly a better approach to the intelligent handling of a condition of oversupply would be to permit responsible producing and distributing agencies to sit down and confer, and agree upon the steps necessary to maintain an equilibrium between production, distribution and consumption, rather than to prohibit by penal statute any such exercise of ordinary, self-evident, intelligent co-operation.
> ". . . Any anxiety that permission to make agreements to correct the present economic unbalance may be abused ought to be allayed by the history of the Webb-Pomerene act. Perhaps out of the chaos that now exists a new impulse along proper economic lines may be given to public thought and opinion."

The law should not stand in the way of SENSIBLE ARRANGEMENTS to keep industry in balance.

The present hit or miss, anarchic system makes all of us poorer, and places an unbearable burden on those who have been denied the opportunity.

Orange Juice

Oranges have been termed by those two big-time observers of the Zeitgeist, Arnold Bennett and H. G. Wells, the "modern staff of life"—a term hitherto sacred to bread. Not so long ago they were just a luxury and their leading function was to decorate Christmas trees.

Almost a thousand tons of them rotted yearly in California, since they were not handsome enough and American taste did not run to marmalade on buttered toast. The Volstead experiment proved its wonderful affinity for gin, and in its pure state it has become the national ichor. Most humans would rather go without their morning toast than forego their hooker of orange juice.

What gave it the final boost into popularity was the vitamine fad. Scientists worked it out that a thimbleful of the juice gives a man enough of the anti-scorbutic Vitamine C to last him a week. So, in our racial exuberance, we gulp it by the flagon to keep on the safe side.

The newest wrinkle is to have it delivered in the morning by the milkman, frozen. Seven a. m. is the psychological time, too, for by then the party is running low.

Saving the Ribbons

Although the Naval Apportionments Committee thinks we shall expend some eight or ten millions more in 1932, it is gratifying to know that the navy itself is going in strong for economy.

All vessels in the fleet are going to salvage their typewriter ribbons. No longer, when faded, will they be cast into the deep to be to a loss to taxpayers and a source of annoyance to fish. Instead the yeomen will run them through a re-inking device and make them as good as new.

We like this idea. What to do with worn ribbons has ranked as the second great harassment to civilization after old razor blades. Hitherto the dodge was to run along a ribbon a toothpick dipped in oil. But the chief result was smudgy writing and bad tempers. A fair grade of ink may be made by soaking ribbons in water with a little gallnut.

At last the navy has solved the problem in a big way. It expects to save in the fiscal period of 1931-32 just $862. This is enough to pay for the powder in a trial shot of one of the S. S. Arizona's guns.

Safety Slogans for Autos

Frank A. Goodwin, when he was Registrar of Motor Vehicles, coined the aptest slogan for safety on the highways.

"You may save a minute but you may lose a life."

In Connecticut it was:

"Go slow and see the town; go fast and see the judge"

Some of the Ohio towns had gruesome skeletons painted on the cross-road signs and the ominous challenge:

"Speeder—The Undertaker is waiting for you."

Shrewd businessmen realize they must advertise constantly to keep the public interested in their stores and their products.

Shrewd public officials should realize that, unfortunately but true, it is utterly necessary to remind auto drivers of the need of constant safety.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

All for the Home

Elsie Robinson

SHE TELLS you that she's never had a thought outside her family.

She says it proudly, almost defiantly — as one boasting of a great record and daring you to equal it. And it is obvious that she feels she should be greatly honored and rewarded for "never having a thought outside her family."

But, alas, she isn't being rewarded. That drooping, aggrieved mouth, those tear-dimmed, angry eyes, tell the story. Such a common, tragic story with the 40-year-old wife!

"Nobody can say I wasn't a good mother," she cries, in that hopeless, resentful tone that has become her habit.

"I never had an interest or a thought outside my home. From the day I married, I lived just for my husband and the children when they came along. Wore myself out trying to do everything the way they liked—

"There's my husband. He can't bear to wear laundried shirts. So I always did them by hand, though we could have afforded to send the washing out. And my girl Lila—she was always a fussy youngster. Things had to be cooked just so before she'd eat them. Same way wit. Eddie . . .

"My huband says I spoiled Eddie. But I believe in being a real mother —not on- of those gad-abouts that are always at a club or a tea when their children need them. I never did hold with women having interests outside their family. I gave up my life for mine. And now what thanks do I get?

"My children treat me as if I was a servant. They thought they knew more than I did before they were out of grammar school. They never confide in me—won't listen to a word of advice. They're always saying I can't understand. Why can't I understand — I'm their mother, ain't I? Sometimes I think they're actually ashamed of me.

"My husband, too. It's years since he asked me to go anywhere with him. He was always nagging me to, when the youngsters were young, saying it would be good for us all if I'd leave them for a while with a hired woman.

"But how could I know what would be happening to them? So, of course, I didn't go. Now he doesn't ask me any more. And he's hardly ever at home at nights. When he is, he has his nose in a book . . . never notices me. I suppose I'm not good enough fo. 'im now, now that I'm worn out working for him and the children. He'll be chasing around next with some office girl—

"THAT'S THE THANKS YOU GET FOR BEING A GOOD WIFE AND MOTHER!"

But has she been a good wife and mother?

She complains that she is treated as a servant. Hasn't she chosen to live as a servant?

She says that her children think they know more than she does. But don't they? What does she, who boasts that she "has never had an interest outside the home," know of the world in which her husband and her children live, know of the astounding changes which are taking place in that world, know of the complicated problems which they must face?

Why should her children confide in her? Why should her husband seek her companionship? What has she to give them? In all save physical requirements, they are strangers to her. She cannot even be their moral guide, for her ideas of morality no longer fit the world in which they live.

She never had an interest outside her home—

But was that a proof of devoted love, unselfish sacrifice? OR WAS IT A PROOF OF HER OWN LAZINESS AND STUPIDITY? Did she refuse to go to clubs and lectures, refuse to read and think and mingle with her kind because she was "so wrapped up in her family?" OR DID SHE REFUSE BECAUSE THINKING AND READING ARE HARD WORK . . . AND SOCIAL LIFE CHALLENGES ONE'S RECORD AND OFTEN EXPOSES ONE'S STUPIDITY?

Did she stay at home because that was the dearest place on earth . . . OR BECAUSE SHE COULD BE THE BIG NOISE THERE, WITHOUT CRITICISM OR COMPETITION? I wonder.

New York Day by Day

Midnight Movies

With times as they are even the glorified cinema Taj Mahals are offering programs starting at midnight. The oldest all night movie house is the New York theater — the home of the first Follies.

Theaters after midnight are only about half filled. Thus choice seats are alway available. Patrons range from the night worker taking his hour off to perhaps an ermined lady and top-hatted gent winding up a night among the flaming tungstens.

Many bring sandwiches, peanuts and bags of fruit to munch while watching a deep dyed villian pursue a timorous heroine. And invariably there is an assortment of talkative drunks. They add to the hilarity by talking back to the characters and making side remarks.

Out of this nocturnal nitwittery has come many of the sly cracks of the variety halls. Now and then chorus girls drift in to rest after an arduous performance and also actors enjoying a busman-like holiday. It is a time when Rialto performers shed airs and fraternize.

Chief among the annoyers are those who have seen the film once and remain for the second show. They tip off what is going to happen as the film unreels and in the hands of experts the comicalities are far more diverting than the usual picture.

Night shows also bring out flickering human shadows — the dope fiend dropping into a muddled nescience, the fugitive enjoying a brief respite, etc., etc. Gamblers often see the second show after their night's play. After midnight, incidentally, one may see two shows for one price also.

Nights out I try to get around to hearing Sneeze, wherever he may be. He is an ebony black, pearly toothed and bullet-headed Negro, who roams the world. As he says, he "pesters a piano" for a living. It was Sneeze who introduced the song wit a thousand verses, "Room 202." He has warbled in Paris, London, New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Palm Beach, Havana and Rio. One of his unprintable madrigals gave the Prince of Wales his biggest laugh in America.

In other days—I have not visited it lately—Forno's was the haunt of the Mexican-Spanish literati, musicians and swash-buckling revolutionists. It was Joe O'Neill, dropping in late one night for enciladas, who overheard a whispered conversation that resulted in beating the press associations on a Nicaragua flare up.

Along that strip of splendorous Vanderbilt avenue running from 42d to 47th st. I have frequently seen a dignified gentleman with a middle part in his snow white beard and whose bush eyebrows are the mournful, glossy black of a raven. He is a type, swinging a gold headed cane, that makes me want to yoo-hoo for Ripley. For stretched across his vest is a watch-chain of varnished wooden spools.

* * *

I asked one of those high-booted, spurred and straw plug-hatted grooms who guard the Vanderbilt ave. entrances of the Biltmore about him. In pure Twickenham Cockney he replied: "A rare one, that. He kymes by diyly and a-Christmas gyves each of us 2 quids. A bit of a queer, I should sy sir!"

* * *

At the Ritz barber shop I learned that Nick, the boot black for 20 years, is paying his first visit to native Italy. Perhaps no other shiner in the city has flicked a rag over so many illustrious boots. He is one of those shy spirits whom life seasons but does not toughen—a courageous mite, existing on crumbs, and sugaring a world needing sweetness. Bon voyage, Nick!

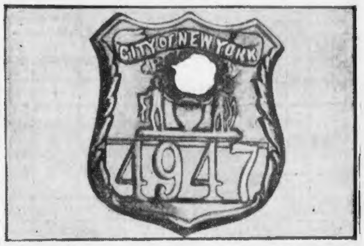
Hellishness of 1931

Two Examples—and One Remedy



PATROLMAN WEBB'S SHIELD WAS BANDIT TARGET

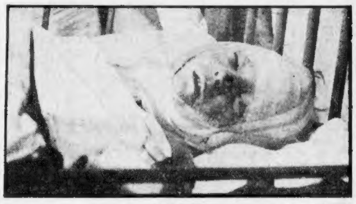
At the top we see the bullet-pierced shield of a New York policeman. This gallant officer was shot dead in the massacre of last Friday that took six lives and wounded 11 other persons.

The shield made a perfect target for the bandit. His bullet pierced the heart and another martyr was added to the appalling list of victims of gang rule for 1931.

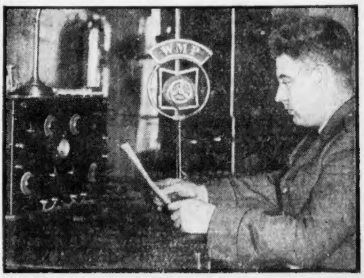
The bullet which pierced this shield also was a direct shot at the institutions we have built up to protect society against bandits and thugs.



LITTLE GLORIA LOPEZ A GANGDOM VICTIM

In the second picture we see one tragic result of the hellishness of banditry in our big cities today. A little child, three years old, the joy and hope of her now childless parents, lies dead from the bullets of the same killers who shot down the policeman and four others.

Surely, civilization must bow its head in shame until every gangster and killer is destroyed.



OUR STATE POLICE USE RADIO—WHY NOT BOSTON?

The short-wave radio for spreading quick alarms, for preventing crimes, and for catching criminals has proved its worth beyond challenge, in many other cities.

Boston is far behind the criminals today, in the adoption of 1931 practices. There is no real reason why we should not have a short-wave system. The State police are using it to great advantage. Boston will not be using the means at its disposal in fighting the growing viciousness of criminals until it adopts this sure and comparatively inexpensive aid to the police.

Chicago's Queer Idea
An Aluminum Palace
Smith's Money Recipe
One Brick, $25,000

By Arthur Brisbane

Walking along Chicago's lake front, from the Michigan Central station to the Blackstone, you are fascinated, as usual, by the pawing horse upon which John A. Logan, perched on his high mound, rides nowhere.

On the edge of the slope a man lies, asleep in the rising sun, a pile of newspapers for his bed. Chicago has signs in parks reading, "Newly seeded, please keep off." But, if it is NOT newly seeded, you may walk, lie, play or sleep anywhere. They have a strange idea here, that the earth, parks included, belongs to the people.

Milwaukee is interesting, because there, gangsters shoot you rarely. The eccentric local police have no partnerships with crime. When something is "pulled off" the police have no share in the profits. For that reason, things are not pulled off. Other big cities, tired of being shot up and shot down, might inquire into that.

Secretary Mellon, who was the Aluminum King, and wore several other American crowns before he gave up business for the Treasury, should see, in Milwaukee, the aluminum palace of science, just built by L. R. Smith, head of A. O. Smith Co. The big building is of polished aluminum, without and within, most beautiful in every detail. The furniture is made of aluminum. You touch a big arm chair and it rolls away, light as a powder puff.

That building, best advertisement the Aluminum company ever had, is devoted to pure science. It is a great series of laboratories in which 600 scientists devote their time and knowledge to problems that affect industry and decide profit or loss. Chemists, physicists, engineers, metallurgists, and 17 patent lawyers are included in the "brains department" of A. O. Smith and Co.

L. R. Smith is the industrial genius who made all the great steel companies junk and abandon their pipe mills, costing tens of millions, and build new ones in imitation of Smith after he showed that he could make, in a week, more miles of pipe than they all together could make in a month, and at half the price.

On one shipment of oil pipe to Texas, Smith paid a freight bill of one million two hundred thousand dollars.

Quite a business, and he is about to reveal another surprise for the pipe makers that will please them no more than the original surprise. That is another story.

The automatic mechanism that makes automobile frames in the Smith factory is the most remarkable industrial performance in this country. Row upon row of iron monsters advance, bite holes in metal with sharp teeth, insert rivets and fasten them, then retire, to come forward again and [illegible] the metal in another place.

A thousand devils, at their silly antiquated tricks, would be dull compared with that phalanx of steel-biting dragons. For $7.50, material and labor included, Smith makes a frame that once cost more than $100.

Do you ask, "Of what possible use can 600 scientists be to a mechanical industry," L. R. Smith will tell you. His scientific building, its surface nearly all glass, has window panes nine feet wide, thirteen feet high. The lowest bid to set those giant sheets of one-inch plate glass in the window frames was $35,000.

One of the scientists made vacuum cups to hold and move the glass sheets, nine men did all the work in a short time, and it cost $5000, instead of $35,000.

Also glaziers came by fast train from all over the United States to see how it was done. That will interest L. J. Horowitz, chief glazier, who was in Europe at the time.

L. R. Smith says the way to make money is simple.

"Find something in universal demand that is being made by old-fashioned people whom easy prosperity has made indifferent. Take their business out of the rut, do it yourself at half the price and at a good profit.

"Thus you benefit the country and earn money to experiment in other directions, which is the only thing worth while."

LABOR JOINS TO BATTLE M'DONALD

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—Ramsay MacDonald became, in a manner of speaking, a British dictator today as he presided over the first cabinet meeting of the new non-partisan government which is preparing to cut $600,000,000 from the budget expenditures.

Charged by the king with forming the emergency government, the prime minister holds his post of power as an individual, but not as the representative of organized labor, which is now marshalling solid opposition ot its former leader.

The program which he laid out for his ministers today is not much different from that which he and Chancellor Philip Snowden tried to force through the Labor government, and the platform of the new ministry is virtually the same as that on which the Labor government split and fell.

TO AVOID TAX BOOST

It is proposed that the greater part of the money needed to balance the budget will be made available by reducing expenses instead of by increasing taxes.

Probably the largest economy will be made by cutting the weekly unemployment dale by 10 per cent.

This means that a jobless man and his wife who now receive about $6.25 a week would get only about $5.65. The allowance of two shillings a week (about 50 cents) for each child of such a couple is not to be reduced.

CAN'T PITCH HAY IN LOCKUP

If Rufus Pratt, Norwell farmer, had stuck to his hay pitching today instead of traipsing off to town in his aged flivver he might still be enjoying liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

But he's in the lockup down to Weymouth charged with robbing summer camps in the Lakewood section. And the hay isn't half pitched.

Seems the Weymouth constables have been looking for Rufus two years or more with a warrant. They probably wouldn't have got him today only the radiator of Rufus' flivver sprung a leak on the way to town and began a-steaming.

He pulled her into a Weymouth filling station for repairs and standing there was Officer Bill Dwyer of the Weymouth police looking right at him.

"Ain't you Rufe Pratt?" says Bill.

"That's jest who I be," says Rufe, matter-of-fact like.

"Well, you're jest the fella we been a-lookin' for the last two years," says Bill. And off they drove to the lock-up.

Ambulance in Death Race to Save Baby

Over the road, in a dramatic race against death, an ambulance sped today from Providence to Children's Hospital in Boston, with two internes keeping alive the veritable breath of life in an 11-month-old Providence boy.

As the fast-moving ambulance, with motorcycle police of two states clearing the way ahead with shrieking sirens, the two perspiring internes from Providence Hospital gave continual manual respiration to the child, a sufferer from infantile paralysis.

For two hours previously, in Providence Hospital, the internes also had given little Richard Fogarty of 1684 Broad st., Providence, manual respiration while hospital authorities sought an institution whose artificial respirator was not employed.

As the ambulance pulled away, hospital telephone operators in Providence were busy notifying cities and towns along the route, and the police were ready to speed the vehicle through each community.

Policemen were waiting at street and highway intersections, and at the Rhode Island-Massachusetts line. Massachusetts state troopers on motorcycles relieved the Rhode Island troopers.

The race against death took slightly more than an hour, and the baby, on arrival, was still alive, although declared to be in a serious condition.

'TOY GUN MAN' IS SEIZED IN GEM THEFT

A lone diamond thief gambled and lost today in an attempt to steal two diamond rings from the Suffolk Loan Co. in Washington st., Roxbury, his short flight ending in capture by two policemen.

The thief, who gave his name as John Carlton, 36 of M st., South Boston, entered the loan company shortly before noon and asked to be shown some diamond rings.

SEIZES DIAMONDS

As the man picked over the tray he pulled what the manager and clerk thought to be a real revolver from his pocket, seized two diamond rings and darted from the shop, slamming the door and snapping a padlock in place outside.

Abraham Diamond, manager of the shop, took a revolver and with Philip Michaelson, a clerk, raced in pursuit, only to find the door locked. Seizing a monkey wrench, Diamond smashed the window, then clipped the padlock off with a pair of wire cutters, and the two men took up the chase.

The pursuers' cries and the sight of the chase drew a crowd in the wake, and all was excitement in Washington st. as a police car, with Sergt. Barthlomew Winn and Special Officer Herbert F. Jones came cruising along.

Sergt. Winn and Special Officer Jones, with better speed to be made on foot, left the police car and headed the pursuers. They were almost up to the fleeing man when he turned into a doorway in Northampton st. and there was trapped.

HAD TOY PISTOL

According to police, the captive admitted the theft, stating:

Police reported that Carlson stripped off his coat and threw it away during the chase, and that the coat later was picked up and found to have a toy revolver in one pocket.

Three Greater Boston youths were arrested today in Providence and brought to Boston for questioning in connection with the murder of Alexander Baxter, 70, Roxbury storekeeper.

While Boston officers were bringing them over the road from Providence, a guard was assigned to protect Hedda Christensen, 15, witness of the holdup and shooting in Baxter's store at Hillside and Wait sts., on Parker Hill.

The stolen automobile used by the killers was found today in Oak Grove ter., Roxbury, and identified by the girl and another witness, John J. Cahill of Wothington st., Roxbury.

RECORDS SHOW CANNON PAID OFF BANK NOTES

Senate Committee Is Seeking New Evidence in $65,000 Anti-Smith Fund

Washington, Aug. 26 (AP)—Bank records showing that $5000 in notes held by a Virginia bank were paid off by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., during the 1928 presidential campaign when he headed the anti-Smith committee of Virginia, were identified today before the Senate campaign funds committee.

The committee is seeking to determine the disposition of more than $65,000 given to the Bishop by E. C. Jameson, of New York, for use in the campaign and whether the law was violated in failure to report expenditure of all the funds.

NOTES PAID OFF

John A. Booker, cashier of the Citizens' Bank & Trust Co. of Blackstone, Va., related that the southern Methodist churchman had a checking account in his bank for 20 or 30 years.

Chairman Nye of the committee observed the Blackstone account showed "a total of Cannon notes for an even $5000".

One of the notes, he said, was for Edward Cannon.

Booker said that was the fact.

Looking over the statement Senator Dill, Democrat, Washington, said:

"It is evident that a number of political contributions of one and two and more dollars were put into this personal account.

"Was it kept as a personal account all the time?"

POLITICAL DOMINATION

Senator Dill pointed out a deposit of $200 in the Cannon account from Raymond Robbins on Sept. 24, 1928. He then read from a report, of Miss Ida L. Burroughs, treasurer of the Virginia anti-Smith committee, showing a $200 contribution by Robbins.

"So that was a political contribution," remarked Dill.

Senator Nye read a letter from Bishop Cannon in October, 1928, to the Blackstone Bank, stating he had $15,000 to $20,000 for deposit as chairman of the Newspaper Supply Company of Richmond.

"Did you have any information that these funds were not of the Newspaper Supply Company?" asked Nye.

"No, sir," said Booker.

C. B. Stevens of Charlottesville, Va., was then called to the stand. He identified a check of $2433.78 made by him to James Cannon, Jr., in October 10, 1928.

The accused are Detective James Mostyn, who Harker claimed administered the beating, and Policemen W. C. Groomes, William R. Laffin and William T. Burroughs. The latter three were in the room. They will be tried by a special board of citizens.

TREE NIPS BOY HUNTING KITE

It's still a puzzle to Morris Factor as to just how he got there, but Morris was certain today that if another kite of his goes vagrant and into a tree, he'll let it stay there.

Morris, who is 10 and lives at 38 Nightingale st., Dorchester, was still nursing a sore shin and knee today—the shin and knee became wedged in a tree crotch at the rear of 37 Wales st., Dorchester.

The boy had climbed the tree to retrieve his kite and slipped into the crotch. Struggle as he would, he could not release himself and was in the tree more than three hours before being discovered by playmates.

Patrolman Jeremiah Sheehan, also failing to release the boy, firemen of Ladder 23 were summoned. They pried the tree limbs apart with heavy jacks and freed Morris.

"Gee, I don't know how I ever got in that place," said Morris today.

The Governor today confirmed early reports that the compulsory automobile insurance rates will be considerably higher than they are for this year.

Young Baldwin's "Dream Play" to Be Produced

London, Aug. 26 (INS)—People who day-dream plots for novels and plays are common enough, but Oliver Baldwin, M. P., son of Stanley Baldwin, former prime minister and leader of the Conservative party, one night dreamed the details of most of a play.

But Morpheus stopped work after only two acts had been dreamed.

Young Baldwin, however, sat down and finished the play. This fall it will be produced under the title of "From the Four Winds."

"I had forgotten when or where I had this dream—it was so long ago," Baldwin said, "but on waking every word, every inflection of the actors' voices, and, what is more, their positions on the stage remained vividly in my mind."

Nautilus Within 350 Miles of Pole

Wilkins Hunts for Place to Dive

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS
Commander of the Wilkins-Ellsworth Transarctic Submarine Expedition.

(Copyright, 1931, Throughout the World by New York American, Inc.; Hearst Enterprises, Inc., and King Features Syndicate, Inc. All Rights Reserved. Reproduction Prohibited in Whole or in Part.)

Aboard Submarine Nautilus at Sea, Aug. 25 — On a course slightly east of north we have been making good progress. At 7 o'clock last night, Greenwich time (3 p. m. Eastern daylight time), we were about 350 miles from the North Pole.

Capt. Wilkins

The sun shines coldly low on the horizon. High winds from the east continue as we push through the scattered ice pack. We have encountered considerable open water today.

Wild choppy waves ride high about us, carrying with them great chunks of steely blue ice, and myriads of small white fragments.

We are in the spawn of the pack. Solid ice lies three miles north, its edge rising and falling in waves. It glinted in the sunshine for a few minutes at noon today when the sun burst through the clouds and snow squalls.

We have moved under motor and engine power along its edge, turning north at every opportunity, looking for an opening or sheltered area where we might push under the floes and use our drills, take soundings and bottom samples and other scientific data, but the wind continues lashing the sea furiously.

SUB IS WAVE-SWEPT

The wave crests ride our superstructure from stem to stern. It is impossible to remain on deck. Dannenhower and Schlossbach are taking the watch in turn, with Clark and Crilley, their assistants, in the conning tower keeping a sharp lookout through the periscope.

The wind whips the tops of the waves into an icy spray, and the ice pack, even far from the edge, heaves with the giant swell.

Soundings show that we are passing over mountain ridges on the ocean's bottom, as the depths of the water jump from 1800 feet to 6000 feet and then back to 3000 and 4000 and 5000 feet within a few miles.

Further east we were over the deep Arctic basin, measuring 7230 feet of water on the fathometer. We are now about in longitude 10 east.

It is miserably cold in the wind. During the period we are on deck it stings, and when the hatch opens the air rushes in creating a biting blast in the control room and galley.

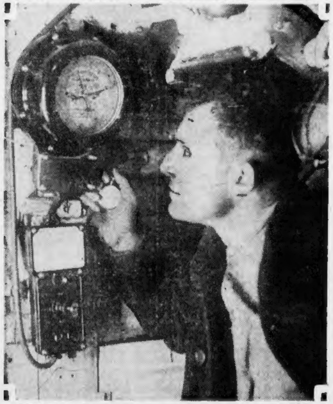
COLD PENETRATING

The men now sleep with their clothes on and in Worumba camel hair sleeping bags, and drag two blankets over them as well.

We are colder in our compartments than I have been in a snow house at 50 below zero.

We are still continuing our way northward, but expect soon to meet the solid pack under which we must push our steely shell.

NOTHING ABOVE BUT FLOATING ICE CAKES
Capt. Dannenhower views the seas with the aid of the special jackknife periscope, installed especially for the dangerous polar trip of the Nautilus, as the submarine feels her way cautiously along under the submerged portions of giant icebergs. Constant watch must be maintained at all times.



MILES CLICK OFF ON TRIP TO POLE
Lieut.-Comdr. Isaac Schlossbach of the U. S. Navy air force, navigating officer of the Nautilus, recording the mileage covered by the polar sub by means of the new type Chernikeeff log which registers speed and mileage. Accurate recordings made by the log are of inestimable value in determining the position of the sub on its approach to the top of the world.

BITTER COLD PENETRATES BELOW OCEAN SURFACE
Capt. Sloan Dannenhower, skipper of the Nautilus, working out his course in the control room as the Arctic submarine plods its way along under the surface of the polar seas on its way to its goal. Plunged in the icy seas, the daring explorers suffer from intense cold despite the heaviest clothing. All these pictures were made by Sir Hubert Wilkins, leader of the expedition. JAPS FIGHT TO GREET LINDYS IN TOKIO

Tokio, Aug. 26 (AP)—Men, women and children fought the police here today in a wild scramble to get a glimpse of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

The famous couple entered Tokio by train after landing at Kasumigaura naval base, 50 miles from the capital, the official terminus of their 7132-mile flight from New York.

At Ueno station the Lindberghs encountered a dense crowd. Several times while the fliers and their official party were being seated in limousines, the crowd became unmanageable, and for a time it looked as though the Lindbergh automobile would be overrun.

GREETED BY LEADERS

Completing the last lap of their long flight, the Lindberghs arrived at Kasumigaura after a 613-mile flight from Nemuro. They were received by Admiral Abo, minister of the navy; W. Cameron Forbes, American ambassador, and other notables, while a crowd sent up a chorus of cheers.

Admiral Abo praised both the Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh for their flight across the Pacific, and hailed them as messengers of peace, tending to strengthen the friendly relations between Japan and the United States.

LINDY GRATEFUL

Lindbergh stressed his appreciation of the hospitality extended from all quarters, and said he and Mrs. Lindbergh were "looking forward with great appreciation to spending a short time in Japan and having the opportunity of meeting and knowing more of your people."

SLAYER NOBLE'S BROTHER HELD

Salisbury, Aug. 26—Charles M. Noble, 25, brother of Russell Noble, serving a life sentence for the murder of Mrs. Clara C. E. Ellis, wealthy Haverhill widow, was under arrest today charged with violating his parole.

He had been selling wine bricks in Haverhill up to Monday night and planned to sell them in Newburyport and surrounding towns.

Two years ago, on a charge of keeping and exposing intoxicating liquor for sale at Salisbury Beach he was fined $100 and given a suspended sentence of 30 days, his parole to run two years.

Noble was forced to halt his sale of wine bricks in Haverhill Monday, according to Salisbury police.

CAPE HONORING BOSTON FLIERS

The "Cape" today received the two adventurers who carried its name over two continents and an ocean in the longest non-stop flight of all time.

Russell Boardman and John Polando, who slept last night in Boston after a civic reception by 50,000 in Columbus Park, took off early from the Boston Airport for the Round Hill Airport in South Dartmouth.

They circled New Bedford at 11 o'clock, proceeding then to the Round Hill Airport for a landing at 11:20.

They flew to Sound Airways Airport, New Bedford, at noon, and were the guests of the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs at a luncheon, followed by a motor parade through New Bedford.

At 3 o'clock, they will take off for Hyannis Airport, where they are due at 3:30. A reception will be held there and at 4:30 there will be a parade through that town in honor of the two men. At 6:30, Boardman, Polando and their escorts will be tendered a banquet in the Coffee House, Hyannis.

HOOVER HEARS GOOD N. E. NEWS

Washington, Aug. 26 (AP)—Former Rep. Stobbs of Massachusetts told President Hoover today that business conditions in New England were showing a decided improvement.

Manufacturing of worsteds, shoes, woolens and other textiles, he said, was going on at more than a normal pace, especially in worsteds.

Some of the worsted mills, he added, were working three shifts, while in the shoe industry many of the factories were running 16 hours a day.

RESERVES OUT FOR RED FLAME

Central Falls, R. I., Aug. 26 (AP)—All available Central Falls police officers were called to duty as Ann Burlak, organizer for the National Textile Workers' Union, returned to the Central Falls strike area.

The General Fabrics Corp., about which several riots raged a month ago, re-opened yesterday, and 50 workers reported. The same workers entered the mill early this morning while 200 strikers watched.

When Miss Burlak arrived she immediately called a mass meeting at which she urged the strikers to form picket lines and not permit any of the workers to enter the mill despite the police edict against picketing.

American Woman Needs Master Says French Writer

Paris, Aug. 26 (INS)—America is the land of the most carefully protected women, a country in which adultery is replaced by multiple divorce cases, according to Andre Maurois, French writer.

"The European man is a lover or trustworthy friend, but never a husband," said M. Maurois. "He could never be one like the American, generous and without any jealousy, at the same time. The marriage of an American girl with a Frenchman is a union of two spoiled children: an unstable mixture.

U. S. LINE BID IS BOOSTED

Washington, Aug. 26 (INS)—At a public hearing before the Shipping Board today P. A. S. Franklin, president of the International Mercantile Marine, today raised the joint bid of his organization and the Roosevelt Steamship Company, from $3,000,000 to $3,500,000 for the old notes of the United States Lines, operators of the Leviathan and other government owned vessels.

Franklin, accompanied by Kermit Roosevelt and John F. Franklin, a son, appeared to protest a new offer of a group headed by Paul W. Chapman, owner of the U. S. Lines. The latter offered slightly more than $3,100,000 for the old notes.

TONSILS AIDED DEMPSEY RIFT

Kansas City, Aug. 26 (AP)—A case of ailing tonsils has been added to the list of purported reasons for the rift between Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion, and Estelle Taylor, his actress wife.

This angle was revealed by Miss Taylor in discussing her husband's divorce suit, in which he stated that she had such a desire for a career in opera that he no longer wished to stand in her way.

"I never had sung in my life. Then I got a sore throat and the doctor took out my tonsils. He looked in my throat when it was healing and told me I would have to take vocal exercises or my throat would be stiff.

"So I went to a teacher and he had me sing. That was how I found that I had a voice."

COURT WARNS BOY JOY-RIDERS

In giving four boys suspended sentences for stealing a car, Judge Richard M. Walsh in Dorchester court today promised to deal more harshly with the next group of boys to come before him on this charge.

"This joy riding must cease," he said. "It is a serious offense, and it is getting more serious every day. We have had one killed and several injured during the past week by automobiles taken without authority."

The four youths appearing today were each given suspended sentences of three months on the charge of taking a car belonging to William Greig of 23 Rosseter st., Dorchester. They were arrested in Quincy last night. Each pleaded guilty.

They are: John Finneran, 17, Howes st., Dorchester; Edward Sullivan, 17, Hancock st., Dorchester; Joseph Holiday, 17, Rowell st., Dorchester, and Edward Cunningham, 18, Folsom st., Roxbury.

CURLEY CALLS HOOVER 'A PESSIMIST'

Mayor, in Revealing Overdue Tax Bills of Employes, Outlines Vast Work Program

Unless they pay their tax bills within 10 days, a group of city employes will be discharged, Mayor Curley announced today. The statement was made during a conference with department heads at City Hall, as the mayor outlined an elaborate program of municipal construction that will be undertaken if unemployment relief is not relieved by next winter.

HOOVER "PESSIMISTIC"

"There are a number of city employes who have not yet paid their tax bills," the mayor told department heads. "Any city employe who does not pay his taxes can work elsewhere. If these people do not pay in the next 10 days they will be through. Let them bring in their bills showing they are paid. The least a city employe can do is pay his taxes."

Commenting on the unemployment situation, Mayor Curley said he did not agree with President Hoover and "other pessimists." He is optimistic that conditions will change this coming winter.

"IF their predictions come true, however," the mayor announced, "I may institute certain reforms. Among others the construction of a $5,0000,000 courthouse, two municipal buildings in Dorchester and one in Charlestown."

"DRIVE-YOURSELF" PLAN

The mayor also promised he would establish a "drive-yourself" service for department heads if things didn't pick up this winter.

"I believe such a service would result in a saving of $100,000 a year," he said. "Heads of departments may not enjoy being deprived of the luxury of being driven to and from their summer homes but if the $100,000 is needed for the jobless, they will drive themselves."

He instructed Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, health commissioner, and Simon Hecht, chairman of the overseers of the public welfare, to confer with private charity agencies to determine how much of the city's public burden they would be able to assume if conditions became so bad that the city would have to cut allotments.

He was informed that the city is bearing the burden of charity and health activities because of a significant drop in contributions to private agencies.

Department heads were asked to use their influence with the City Council in effecting the sale of parcels of land of no further use to the city. It was estimated this would net the city $300,000.

COURT SCORES GIRL 'DECOY'

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 26 (INS)—Geraldine Jackson, 17, alias Ruth Callahan, who claimed to have been used by federal prohibition agents as a "decoy" in making liquor buys, today was sentenced to a year's probation and severely lectured in addition.

Miss Jackson was taken before City Judge George W. Woltz on an intoxicattion charge. Previously she had claimed that she became intoxicated drinking in several speakeasies visited in company with Ralph Dell, a federal agent. Federal authorities have denied that Miss Jackson was in their employ.

Miss Jackson was arrested early in the month following an automobile accident.

Deputy Shot Dead Crying "Coward"

Mexico City, Aug. 26 (INS)—Funeral rites were being arranged today for Deputy Manuel H. Ruiz of the State of Jalisco, who was killed last night as he stood on the rostrum of the Chamber of Deputies when his charge of cowardice hurled at his colleagues drew an answer in the form of sixty bullets from all sections of the chamber.

Two other deputies, Sebastian Allende and Estaban Garcia Alva and an unidentified spectator in the gallery, were wounded.

May we return our sincere gratitude to all those who have given us in so many ways their sympathy in the loss of our dear husband and father, Denis A. McCarthy.

GIRL GUARDED AS 3 ARE HELD IN MURDER

heart, and that this was the cause of death. He was also burned by fire from a lantern which he overturned in falling.

The abandoned automobile used by the killers was found by Patrolman John O'Connell of Station 10, Roxbury Crossing, at a point about a mile and a half from the scene of last night's tragedy.

Mrs. Bessie Shepard of Oak Grove ter. told police that shortly after 10 o'clock last night the auto drove up and the lights were switched out. In the dark she did not see the men leave it. The murder had occurred a few minutes after 10.

At that spot the five inspectors assigned to the case began their investigation. The Christensen girl, whose home is in Darling st., Roxbury, was taken there and said it was the machine in which she saw the killers flee.

GIRL VIEWS ROGUES

Cahill was called there and identified it as an automobile he saw parked in Wait st. shortly before 10 o'clock last night. It attracted his attention because it was parked on the steep grade of Parker Hill and headed downhill. He is an auto salesman. He had also noted the first three numerals.

Look for Them!

These descriptions of the two men were sent throughout New England and large cities of the east, after questioning the girl today:

No. 1—Thirty years old, 5 feet 10 inches; slim; wearing dark coat, light trousers, gray soft hat. This man wore black gloves in the holdup.

No. 2—Twenty-five years old, five feet 6 inches; stout; brown suit, green cap.

Hedda Christeson later was taken to headquarters a second time to go over photographs in the rogues' gallery. A clerk in Baxter's store, she was close at hand as the aged man struggled to protect the $15 over which the robbers killed him.

The inspectors assigned to run down the slayers are Joseph Rollins, James A. Dennessy, William Crowley, John P. McCarthy and Leonard Banks.

The automobile was carefully searched for fingerprints, but police maintained secrecy as to whether or not any were found. The owner of the machine is Daniel R. Keenan, Regent st., Roxbury, and it was stolen from in front of his house.

"We'll give you all the help you want; we'll use every man we can spare on this case—but we'll get the men who killed Baxter," said Deputy Supt. McDevitt, chief of the bureau of criminal investigation, as he sent the inspectors out on the case.

HE BATTLED THUGS

Arthur Brooks, Hillside st., and Harry Dyer, also of Hillside st., both of whom saw the automobile where it was parked just before the crime, were also carefully questioned for further clues. But in the darkness they had not particularly noticed who was in the car.

Two men participated in the robbery of Baxter's little store, but it is believed they had a confederate waiting at the wheel of the machine.

The 15-year-old girl told police that Baxter bravely grappled with one of the pair, while the other robber opened the cash register and scooped out the money.

When the aged victim was besting his younger foe, the girl said, the other bandit ordered his companion to shoot.

A shot rang out and Baxter staggered toward the door, still fighting, and in the wake of his assailant.

He collapsed on the sidewalk, overturning a lantern that guarded construction there.

The flames burned Baxter's clothing and seared him about the face, hands and body.

Miss Christenson was sitting outside the store, she told police, when the two men approached the store.

BAXTER POWERFUL MAN

Baxter, a powerful man, and towering more than six feet in height, was seated on a keg.

The girl said she went in to wait on the "customers" but heard one say, "We want your money."

"The big man was first in and Mr. Baxter made a rush for him," she told police.

"The shorter of the two stood by the door at first and then came in to take the money.

"I heard the terrible explosion and knew then that Mr. Baxter was hurt.

"It was terrible!"

vacancies created by the Sept. 4 lay-off. The present agreement provides that in the temporary suspensions in either rapid transit or surface lines the length of service determines the order of lay-off.

According to Elevated officials prospective changes in equipment, by which one man will operate doors of several cars simultaneously have not yet been definitely decided upon. It was admitted that installation of this equipment would probably result in reduction of personnel on all rapid transit lines.

Criticism aroused by the retaining in collector jobs by married women whose husbands were working was answered in a statement by the "L" which pointed out that seniority prevailed in all cases of the kind.

Some of the women, officials said, have been employed as long as 28 years, and the last woman engaged as a collector has four years of service.

Settlement Worker Held for Extortion

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—Mrs. Antoinette Barbo, for 19 years a settlement worker, was arrested today on charges of extorting $5 a month for three years from a widow and mother of six children she aided in getting a $40 a month pension. Other cases of similar nature are being investigated.

NEW BRITISH CABINET MEETS

25 cents a week instead of 15 cents as at present.

Another substantial economy which is proposed is a reduction in the pay of government employes.

Cabinet ministers who get $25,000 a year would lose 20 per cent of that stipend. Other civil service salaries would be cut on a sliding scale from 20 per cent down. The lower grades of civil servants would not be affected, but even they would be subject to a cut in the bonus they now receive.

Members of the House of Commons may have to take a 5 per cent cut in their $2000 salaries.

School teachers and police would lose about 12½ per cent of their pay and soldiers and sailors would take a smaller reduction.

MILLIONS SAVED

Savings on education are expected to reach about $57,500,000; in the fighting services $45,000,000. The health services would be cut by $8,750,000 and agriculture by $6,250,000. About $40,000,000 would be taken from the road fund and projects for improvements and maintenance would be curtailed.

In the meantime Labor's bitter revolt against its former leader took definite shape especially when the Hamstead branch of the party formally expelled MacDonald. This is his home district.

Today's most important labor meeting was a joint session of the general council of the trades union congress, the national executive of the Labor party, and the consultative committee of the parliamentary Labor party.

Tomorrow the Miners' Federation executive meets and there will be a session of the Seaham division of the Labor party executive to decide status of Mr. MacDonald. The prime minister represents Seaham in parliament.

The dole has been running into debt at the rate of $5,000,000 a week, borrowing from the treasury, whose advances to the unemployment fund have practically balanced payments to the debt sinking fund.

DOAK CALLS ON NATION TO END ERA OF FEAR

Binghamton, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP)—The nation was called upon today by Secretary Doak of the Labor Department to use every effort to shake off despondency and work for return of better conditions.

At the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the Endicott-Johnson Corporation, the secretary praised the work of George F. Johnson, founder, and called attention to figures showing about 90 per cent capacity operation of shoe factories throughout the United States.

A NATIONAL DUTY

"The administration has been and is doing everything it can to hasten the return of business," the secretary said, quoting President Hoover's statement that "economic depression cannot be cured by anything except action of the producers and consumers themselves."

"It is hard to shake off despondency," the secretary continued, "but under present conditions the shaking off becomes a national and human duty.

CALL TO OPTIMISM

"I urge on the employed worker, on the manufacturer, on every commercial and building executive, and on the editors of our newspapers, on the clergy and professional men, and on every citizen that they give aid and encouragement to the end that the cloud of fear that seemingly shadows the land shall be dispelled.

"With our resources, our busines genius, our skilled workers, our strong financial condition, America must soon take its proper place as a busy nation with all our people regularly employed. We are working to this end."

'WITCH' HELD IN TENTH DEATH

Detroit, Aug. 26 (INS)—Formal charges or murder were lodged today against Mrs. Rose Veres, 48, as the result of the death of the 10th "insurance" roomer in eight years in her ukempt boarding house.

Mrs. Veres, who, according to police is known as "the witch" to her neighbors, received approximately $20,000 on insurance policies of the men who named her as beneficiary.

She was arrested in 1925, charged with murder and released after an inquiry into the other deaths. Five of the men died of acute alcoholism, two succumbed to carbon monoxide poisonig and two hanged themselves.

The latest death was that yesterday of Stev Mak, 68, roomer, who fell from a ladder through an attic window.

According to Mrs. Veres, he lost his balance.

ROOSEVELT HAS TIGER ANGRY

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic Governor of New York, and Tammany Hall have reached the parting of the ways.

Angered because the Governor yesterday refused their request for an investigation of alleged graft and corruption in Republican controlled cities upstate, Senator John J. Dunnigan and Assemblyman Irwin Steingut, Democratic leaders, said they would "fight to the last ditch" the recommendation of Mr. Roosevelt that the Hofstadter committee investigating New York city be empowered to grant immunity to witnesses.

The Governor, in his message read at the opening of the special session, confined his recommendations to the broadening of the power of the Hofstadter committee, thus closing the door to any effort by the Democratic minority to introduce bills looking to investigations of upstate communities.

Under the provisions of the state constitution, only such matters as may be recommended by the Governor may be considered at extraordinary sessions of the legislature.

Mysterious $20,000 Fire at Caribou, Me.

Caribou, Me., Aug. 26 (AP)—Fire of unknown origin early today destroyed several potato houses, a stabl and a filling station and damaged a house and 10 Canadian Pacific refrigerator cars. The loss was estimated at $20,000.

The potato houses, besides the Canadian Pacific tracks, were owned by Mitton Poland Co., John B. Roberts and the Scott estate. The filling station was owned by Percy Lyons and the stable by John J. Brown.

Bambino Adopted by Jap Film Star

Los Angeles, Aug. 26 (AP)—A two and one half year old Japanese boy, bearing the name of Alexander Hays and babbling baby talk like any American infant, has become the legally adopted son of Sessue Hayakawa, motion picture actor, and his wife, Tsuru.

Hayakawa said the boy's father died before Alexander was born, and he became acquainted with the mother in New York a year ago.

AWAITS SHOOTING TRIAL

Her gun pal, Robert Mahoney, died in a wild gun chase in which a state trooper was shot. She's in the Worcester jail waiting trial in connection with the shooting. Her foot was badly injured in auto smash that ended the gun chase. So goes part of the history of Helen Galonek. You see her above as she writes a relative. Below, in a pensive mood, as she sticks to her crutches, a very necessary equipment. Mahoney had stolen the auto used in the gun chase. When halted by tree, he rushed into woods and was killed by police gun fire. His friend Helen must now answer to the law. (Staff photo.)

Raider Loses Girl Friend

By Authur "Bugs" Baer

His girl friends.

Federal government will not buy any more liquor for lady decoys. It won't even take 'em to the movies.

That's tough on the girls who have been acting as guinea pigs for the raiders. The usual procedure has been to purchase a sample slug of hootch for the lady informer. She downs it. Screams. Falls flat on her face. Then she gets up, dusts herself off, straightens her hat and says:

"Gosh; that's good."

The ladies get paid for helping to grab information for future raids. It's nice work.

But the booze has been so bad lately that none but college graduates need apply.

After the guinea pig has been removed to the hospital and given the pulmotor, the dry agent works on his swindle sheet and marks down the price of the poison as entertainment.

There's all kinds of ways of making a living even in a depression. But, lately, the lady decoys are complaining that the speakeasies are diluting the evidence.

CURLEY'S SEDAN WRECKED BY SPEEDER

The shiny, new sedan of Mayor James M. Curley was wrecked early today when it crashed into the iron fence and concrete pillar of Public Memorial High School, Townsend and Warren sts., Roxbury.

Charles Manning, the Mayor's chauffeur, was forced onto the sidewalk to avoid a speeding car that turned from Warren st., into Townsend st., he said.

ON WAY HOME

Manning was returning home after a long day with the mayor in paying tribute to Russell Boardman and John Polando, New York to Turkey fliers.

He had "gassed up" after leaving the mayor at Nantasket in preparation for an order to meet the Mayor at the Nantasket summer home at 8:30 a. m. today.

The bumper of the Curley machine was torn off, one headlight smashed, a mudguard curled up and the chassis thrown out of line by the impact. The left front wheel was demolished.

NO REPORT MADE

Sergt. Frank Sullivan of that station investigated, however, and said he would make no report "because nobody was injured."

First arrivals at the scene recognized the "576" registration number as that of Mayor Curley's but late arrivals were blocked from a view of the plate by a handkerchief, carefully placed over the number.

Manning said the speeding machine that caused the accident continued on its way.

NAVY PROBING WOMAN'S DEATH

San Francisco, Aug. 26 (AP)—A naval board of inquiry was called today to investigate the death of Mrs. Daisy Price, 26, bride of Lieut.-Comm. George D. Price, after police closed their investigation with the report of a coroner's jury that the woman came to her death in "a manner unknown."

Mrs. Price died after falling four stories to the pavement beneath a window in her apartment. Price testified his wife had not committed suicide, had not fallen because she became overbalanced while intoxicated, and that she "would have thrown herself from the fourth story window of her hotel to prevent someone from laying hands upon her."

Lieut. R. D. D. Downer said Mrs. Price requested him to remain after the party broke up because Lieut.-Comm E. W. Spencer "was feeling pretty good, and she didn't want to be left alone with anyone so hilarious."

Price was on duty on the Lexington while the party was in progress. Several members of the party denied that anyone of them had returned to Mrs. Price's apartment after taking formal leave.

Survey of British seaports reveals more than 1000 officers and 45,000 seamen out of work and 752 ships representing 2,044,000 tons idle.

The Merchant Navy Officers' Federation reported it has knowledge of 1048 unemployed captains, navigating officers and engineers in the United Kingdom.

HAVERHILL TO KEEP ALIENS

Haverhill, Aug. 26—Eight graduate nurses of the staffs of the local municipal hospitals, whose positions were thought to be endangered by the alien precedent established in Boston, will retain their berths.

City Solicitor Priest of Haverhill has filed an opinion with the municipal council in which he states "there is no law that an alien cannot be employed in a position not classified under Civil Service."

There is a difference of opinion among council members as to later procedure, but the majority are of the belief that the nurses should retain the positions for which they prepared themselves by years of student nursing in local institutions.

Paddles for Pupils, But They Must Be Wood That's Soft

Butler, Pa., Aug. 26—Perhaps soft wood won't hurt so much. Anyway the school board has issued specifications for paddles to be used on the school kids.

The paddles must be made of soft pine and not more than one-quarter inch thick.

A regulation paddle was ordered after a teacher was haled to court for using a heavy one.

KIDNAP PLOT IS FOR HIGH STAKE

Chicago, Aug. 26 (AP)—Belief was expressed by Chicago detectives today that kidnapers who are holding John J. Lynch, wealthy turfman, were in reality playing for bigger stakes than the $250,000 they are reported to have demanded for his release.

They said they believed his abductors were trying to wrest from Lynch the control of the General News Bureau, a horse race service organization, which would give them yearly profits far greater than the $250,000 ransom.

THE LOVES OF CHARLIE CHAPLIN

King of Laughs and World's Unluckiest Lover

(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American)

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Charlie has had a checkered love career. His second marital venture practically on the rocks, Fate again intervened in the hope of re-establishing for the comedian happiness.

CHAPTER 21

From the Chaplin mansion, from his wife herself, came the news that a blessed event was to happen the following summer—the summer of 1925.

Charlie's child-bride told the world that she anticipated a visit from the stork.

And although on Christmas eve, just shortly before the rumored separation, Charlie attended a gay party given by a prominent motion picture actress, at which Lita was not present, it was hoped a reconciliation could be effected.

TWICE WITH HER

But now a child was to be born to the Chaplins. Charlie was sought out for a comment, but he would say nothing except:

"I am happy."

Would Lita and Charlie find love again in a new little life?

Charlie, the domestically inclined, the home-wanting, home-loving worshipper of fireplace and family—would he return to Lita and start anew?

Would Chaplin's announcement of a settlement on his child wife be dropped now that he was to become a father?

Would divorce, anticipated as the logical conclusion of a shattered romence, be forgotten by the film king?

But it was only speculation, for in the interim Lita joined members of her family in consulting attorneys and had solicited the services of Edwin McMurray, her uncle, an attorney.

And although he announced that financial negotiations were in progress had nothing to do with the contemplated actions for legal separation or divorce, Hollywood's wise ones knew differently. Charlie himself refused to comment on the sudden turn of his domestic affairs.

He remained placid and calm. But for that matter, so did Lita.

And then on Feb. 1, 1925, Lita let it be known that she was worried; that there was more than just love to her romance with the screen comedian. She let it be understood that she wanted in black and white and properly signed a trust fund of from $100,000 to $500,000 created by her husband for their child yet to be born.

Charlie was stunned but still he maintained that he was keenly desirous of making adequate financial provision for his child, if one was born.

And he further said that he considered the asking of a cold hard cash settlement for the unborn child a somewhat premature" request.

FRIENDS TO RESCUE

In many respects they were similar.

Both wives wed the screen star secretly.

Lita, like Mildred, found herself at home with her mother on the first Christmas eve after her marriage. And, on both occasions, Charlie attended gay parties. And, on both occasions, neither Mrs. Chaplins attended.

Both child-brides were ordered to quit the screen immediately by their husband.

Friends came to Charlie's rescue when the parallels were sounded. And they hit the situation rightly when they said that Charlie, carried away by a pretty face, neglected to inspect the minds of his two young brides. He hoped against hope that mentally he would find compatibility.

They were right that marital binding was a galling yoke to the filmster, whose young brides hoped to hold him by the knot itself.

And so months rolled by. Charlie kept his nose to the grindstone. He worked harder than ever at the studios. And his young wife remained at home, awaiting the great arrival.

On June 27, 1925, a son was born to the Chaplins, and they called him Charles Spencer Chaplin, Jr.

Charlie was extremely proud.

More than ever word got around that the young son would bring Charlie and Lita together again. And it did, for the time being.

He was a darling young son, who looked like his famous father. Charlie was really happy, not because of marital felicity, but because he was a father and the boy would live.

Charlie watched the youngster. They were indeed happy months for him.

And then not quite a year later, Lita gave birth to another son for Charlie. On March 30, 1926, a baby boy, whom they called Sydney Earle Chaplin after Charlie's brother, came into the world.

RUMORS CEASE

The fates were kind to Charlie.

They felt that Charlie had at last two sons, boys he had always wanted, and that he would find in his 40-room palace the dreams of his heart.

But the marriage wasn't to be, that's all. Lita realized she hadn't personality or the mentality to hold Charlie.

As she said recently on a visit to Boston:

"I regret that marriage with Charlie Chaplin was shattered in the divorce court. But I can't blame anyone for the disaster. Charlie is a genuis. I am glad I married him if only for a short time. Memory of my romance with the greatest artist of the screen survives."

A little more than a year after the birth of the second son Mrs. Chaplin obtained interlocutory divorce papers. The divorce became final Aug. 25, 1928.

Though a battle of "statements" was waged, in which the comedian denied charges of indiscretions and cruelty, Chaplin did not contest his wife's action. And although Lita brought the name of Edna Purviance into the proceedings, Chaplin continued to say nothing.

He did settle somewhere in the neighborhood of $500,000 on her and the two boys whose custody she was awarded.

The divorce created considerable excitement and sensation when publication of the divorce mentioned several prominent picture actresses.

Charlie was heart-broken. He was so sickened by the public washing of his family linen that personal physicians feared a nervous breakdown and Charlie was ordered to his bed for a long rest.

Nothing quite "got" Charlie as did the sensational charges of his second wife. Charlie lost 40 pounds. He closed himself in for months.

He was broken in spirit and health.

Friends feared for him.

(The concluding chapter in the affairs of Charlie Chaplin and Lita will be told tomorrow.)

Boston First to Acclaim Star

One of the most exciting events in the life of Frances Starr occurred in Boston. It was in this city that "Rose of the Rancho" opened, changing the name of Frances Starr from that of an unknown actress to a star.

The former stage actress is now in Hollywood, where she recently made her film debut in "Five Star Final," followed by a role in "The Star Witness," both First National pictures.

Film producers regarded Miss Starr's work so favorably that she was signed for the second film even before the first was completed.

Miss Starr expressed herself as wanting to do any future stage plays as films first. Her explanation is this:

"The screen shows up each fault in great detail. A player learns a great deal about acting and makeup from watching himself on the screen. Just from seeing my work in the two pictures so far I have learned many things that years on the stage have not taught me. The screen is the most revealing medium in existence. It is a ferret bringing to light every flaw."

Japanese Soprano With Opera Company

The Boston engagement of the Civic Light Opera Company at the Colonial in September will be made the more attractive by the presence of Hizi Koyke, the Japanese soprano, who will sing the part of "Yum Yum" in "The Mikado." Miss Koyke, in the minds of many, is the world's finest "Madame Butterfly," and will sing the role of the unhappy Nipponese girl with the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company this fall. The Boston visit of the Civic company is for four weeks, the first two of which will be devoted to "The Mikado," and the last two to a double-bill production—"Trial by Jury" and "H. M. S. Pinafore."

STUDIO LIFE PUTS LAUGHS IN LLOYD FILM

'The Gate Crasher' Deals With Trials of Novice in Hollywood

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor.
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 26—Back in the mind of Harold Lloyd there has always been a desire to do a "Merton of the Movies." I don't mean that Harold has any intention of borrowing the plot of Glenn Hunter's well remembered play, but I do mean he has wanted to do a similar comedy. He has been working for some time on the idea with the result that "The Gate Crasher" is written and waiting to be produced.

Louella O. Parsons

The story is laid right here in Hollywood and it has to do with the bespectacled comedian trying to break into the movies. How he does it and the people he meets will be part of the theme. And in this picture, at least, there is a romance. In fact, Harold says the story has more romance than any of his other pictures.

I have no doubt it will be one of the most popular of the Lloyd comedies for people do love to see how the wheels go round and now that there is scant chance of visiting the movie studios, it is more interesting than ever to get inside information.

The Play "Safe in Hell"

"Safe in Hell," the jinx picture of First National, has no terrors for Dorothy Mackaill. The picture was first intended for Marilyn Miller. Marilyn read the script and said "Thumbs down, the story is not for me." Then it was handed to Barbara Stanwyck. She liked it and agreed to appear at First National studios to begin work on September 1. But Barbara, you will remember, had a battle with Columbia. She broke her contract, automatically cancelling her contractual relations with First National. Then Lillian Bond was named but alas, Miss Bond, after several tests, was unanimously voted down as not having had enough experience. Darryl Zanuck, eager to get the picture out of his system, sent the manuscript to Dorothy Mackaill.

Seen and Heard:

There is much talk of the approaching marriage of Louise Strauss Celestine to Rudolph Cameron, ex-husband of Anita Stewart. Mrs. Celestine is the daughter of W. S. Strauss, banker, and heiress to his large fortune. She has been married twice and if she marries Rudy Cameron it will be her third attempt. A post card from Bess Meredyth and Mike Curtiz speaks of meeting Robert Woolsey and Bert Wheeler at the Bristol Hotel in Budapest. She says they were there with their wives. Apparently the reconciliation between Bert and his pretty little wife has been permanent. Jimmy Walker, New York's mayor, Bess says, is a hero in Germany, and has received more attention than the most popular movie star. A divorce, we are told, will soon be started by the actor husband of an actress wife. The wife has been in Europe and the divorce is waiting until she comes to Hollywood.

COMEDY, SONG AND DANCE RULE SCOLLAY STAGE

"Variety" in every sense of the word has been assembled by Manager Elliston Vinson for his stage show at the Scollay Sq. Theater, which literally abounds with excellent entertainment to suit all tastes.

On the Variety Horizon

By JACK GOULD

With each passing week, more and more movie artists are making "personal" appearances in Boston vaudeville houses, and next week is no exception. In fact, next week the Hub receives a double portion of these screen artists in the persons of Mildred Harris Chaplin, due at the Scollay Square Theater, Monday, and Bessie Love, who arrives at the Keith Boston Saturday.

* * *

What will please the many admirers of both these young ladies is the advance news that they have obtained vaudeville vehicles that will do justice to their acting ability.

* * *

Miss Mildred Harris Chaplin is not unknown to movie-goers, having appeared in more than 50 motion pictures in her career.

Her early marriage to Charlie Chaplin has also done its share in bringing this young lady's name before the public eye.

As for Miss Love, her startling "come-back" in "The Broadway Melody" was a source of great satisfaction to her many followers, and a great future in talking pictures was predicted for her. She has since appeared in "Hollywood Revue," "Chasing Rainbows," "Morals for Women," "See America Thirst," and "Conspiracy."

* * *

Even former musical comedy favorites are now turning to the vaudeville stage, as is evidenced by the forthcoming appearance of that exasperatingly funny team of Ina Williams and Jerry Delaney who will undoubtedly provoke many laughs this coming week at Loew's Orpheum Theater.

* * *

Of interest to "variety" fans is an advertisement appearing in this week's "Variety" (a theatrical magazine) in which Warner Brothers inform the trade that James Cagney, star of "The Public Enemy" is under contract to them and not available to anyone else without their sanction.

It seems that the phenomenal success of Edward G. Robinson's stage appearance has prompted young Cagney to try the same thing but evidently Warner Brothers have different plans in mind for this clever lad.

* * *

What has caused many so-called "showmen" in New York amazement is the current bill at the Palace Theater, which is now in its sixth week at this house, without a single replacement. The success of this intact bill has led R. K. O. executives to establish the policy of building their shows with the view of keeping them for runs.

* * *

The first Fanchon and Marco unit for Publix is scheduled for the Metropolitan Theater Friday and is called "North, South, East and West" and is said to be very spectacular.

This is Fanchon and Marco's first significant entry into the Hub, yet they are quite famous throughout the West and in New York city. Starting on a small scale in California, these exponents of dance and staging technique have rapidly risen.

Law Loses but Pictures Gain

Oliver Hardy, now at Loew's Orpheum with Stan Laurel in his first feature-length comedy, "Pardon Us," is the son of a prominent politician of Atlanta, Ga.

He was graduated from the University of Georgia law school, but instead of practicing law went on the stage as a singer in vaudeville.

He was a silent comedian in short comedies for several years and then went with the Hal Roach Stock Co. in 1926. After a year of minor roles, he began his co-starring with Stan Laurel.

Marie Dressler amazed the studios a few days ago when she appeared on the lot in a Chinese coat and bright red Chinese silk pajamas.

SOVIET FINDS WAR IDOL IN GEN. BUDIONY

Moscow, Aug. 26 (AP) — The Soviet people's craving for a national military hero finds an outlet in Gen. Semen Mikhailick Budiony, Cossack with long mustaches, whose first wife fought side by side with him.

Gen. Budiony's mustaches make him easily recognizable.

He is noted for his anecdotes of army life, especially after he has drunk the health of his companions at a party.

WIFE SHOOTS SELF.

Budiony has had his tragedy. He once was married to a woman no less a soldier than himself. In spite of the fact that she was the mother of two children, she took part in battles side by side with her husband. She could ride a horse better than many of her mates of the other sex. She was an expert rifle woman.

One day, when all their battles were over and more peaceful days had come, the soldier-wife was cleaning her rifle and shot herself.

Budiony married again, but not a woman-soldier. He said he would never again wed a woman who used firearms. His second wife is a well-known actress in the Mali Theater of Moscow.

Budiony has been well rewarded for his services to the revolution. He wears four decorations of the Order of the Red Star.

ROSE FROM RANKS

He is an active figure in Soviet affairs, frequently visiting factories and collective farms, where he makes speeches and talks with workers and peasants.

Budiony is a Cossack from the Don region. Born in 1883 into a poor peasant family, he grew up in poverty without any kind of schooling. He fought in the Russo-Japanese war as a private, and during the World War was a petty officer.

The revolution brought the obscure soldier to high rank. He won for himself the reputation of a "brave Red soldier," defeating many White officers and the Polish forces.

OAKLAND PLANS BIG DRIVE

The Oakland Motor Car Company will spend $500,000 in eight weeks' advertising campaign beginning this week, it was announced at the factory.

This campaign, one of the biggest ever launched by an automobile company during a similar period of time, has been designed to serve as a backbone of a business drive which the company will sponsor during late August and September.

An additional purpose of the campaign, it was pointed out, is to further acquaint the public with the quality of the Oakland Eight and Pontiac Six and entrench the company in its position of third largest producer in the automobile business, a distinction which it has enjoyed for many months.

BUYERS ASK FOR FREE WHEELING

The recent announcement by Willys-Overland that free-wheeling is now available on all its passenger cars, including the low priced Willys Six, has won wide public acceptance according to advices being received at the factory from dealers throughout the nation. Dealers declare that, in the great majority of cases, buyers insist on cars with this popular and modern feature installed.

The free-wheeling feature, provided at extra cost, was first introduced on the new low priced Model 95 Willys-Knight and shortly thereafter was made available on all of the company's passenger cars.

Engineers throughout the automobile industry are showing marked interest in Willys-Overland's free-wheeling installation, especially the control mechanism which is declared to be the most advanced and simplified yet developed.

DESOTO IN NEW SALES RECORDS

Retail deliveries by De Soto dealers for the week ending Aug. 1, were higher than any other week in the history of De Soto Motor Corporation, according to a statement issued by L. G. Preed, general sales manager.

The week ending July 18 was 8 per cent over the week just mentioned. Baker Killed When Auto Crashes Rock

Northfield, N. H., Aug. 26—Stanislaw Norocki, 50, proprietor of the Polish Bakery in Franklin, was killed when an automobile driven by Rudolph Mathaiesel hit a rock and overturned, crushing him.

HE'S SOVIET MILITARY HERO

Gen. Semen Mikhailick Budiony, fighting Cossack, who has become the military hero of Soviet Russia. His great moustaches add to his picturesque appearance. His first wife fought side by side with him in many battles. He rose from the ranks by valiant service in many actions. That facial adornment should win battles by scaring the enemy into a non-fighting state.

Famous Police Horse to Be Pensioned After 9 Years

"Prince," who for many years has been the favorite police horse of the Middlesex Fells division of the Metropolitan police force, has driven back his last crowd, caught his last runaway, and paused at his last police box. The last of this week he is to be pensioned and sent away to enjoy a long rest.

For nine years "Prince" has been patrolling the 75 miles of bridle path in the Middlesex Fells reservation and for the past five years he has been the mount of Officer Henry C. Flinker.

The horse's ability to catch runaways in the reservation has always been noticeable.

SOUND-PROOF RIDES OFFERED

Several thousand new sound-proofed Nash cars with Synchro-Shift free wheeling will be placed at the disposal of motorists everywhere in the country during the first week in September as an unprecedented feature of national "Guest Ride" week.

Through its big organization of dealers and distributors, the company has extended a cordial invitation to every motorist in the country to enjoy a sound-proofed ride in the famous new Nash models, and to learn at first hand the new Nash Synchro-Shift free wheeling, which provides silent synchro-shift and silent sound speed accelaration as well as free wheeling

The invitation, beginning Aug 30 to Sept. 6, is extended to everyone interested in automobile progress, whether or not he is in the market for a car, and entails no obligation whatever on the part of the guest, who will not be solicited for business during the week.

HUDSON-ESSEX SALES JUMP

"Retail sales of new Hudson-Essex cars made by our retail department this year to date, show a 25 per cent increase over the same perior a year ago," says C. L. Nutter, general manager of the Henley-Kimball Company, distributors of Hudson-Essex cars.

"Sales have held up well through July and August and there is every indication that we may expect continued activity through the fall months.

"The introduction of selective free wheeling together with the addition of five De Luxe models to our line, has had much to do with our increase in sales. Effective Aug. 17, an automatic starting device is offered on both Hudson and Essex. This device is known as Startix and will be optional equipment. It automatically starts the motor the instant the ignition switch is turned on, and thereafter automatically starts the motor if for any reason it should stall."

CAR CARNIVAL THIS WEEK

The display is on view at the company's showroom at 900 Commonwealth ave. Included are models from all four Studebaker lines—the six, and the Dictator, Commander and President eights.

The new custom colors, according to Mr. Sullivan, include shades and combinations which ordinarily would command a premium price. They are now available in Studebaker at no extra charge. Included are cheerful blues, browns, greens and greys which blend harmoniously with fenders, mouldings, wheels and stripings in matched or contrasting shades.

TEXAS TIGHTENS OIL CLAMP

Austin, Tex., Aug. 26 (AP)—Interest of Mid-Continent oil men was divided today between an effrot of the state railroad commission to conquer the unruly East Texas field and tightening of a clamp on production in Kansas.

With crude oil and gasoline prices rising as a result of a three-state shutdown, the Kansas public service commission ordered the withdrawal today of an exemption for 27 "chat" wells in the rich Ritz-Canton pool of McPherson county, which was closed Monday.

The Texas commission considered questions of physical waste in the East Texas field, closed under martial law soon after Gov. W. H. Murray ordered out National Guardsmen to halt production in Oklahoma.

Chairman Terrell said a new regulatory order would be made effective Sept. 1. The last order, setting the field's allowable at 270,000 barrels daily, was disregarded.

Marlboro, Aug. 26—Five youths were captured at the point of revolvers by four Marlboro policemen today, after they broke into the Airport Garage, on the Boston Post road.

At police headquarters the boys gave their names as Daniel Mitchell 22, no home; George Macuga, 22, East Everett; Kiernan Baseur, 17, Hally st., Worcester; Roger Eggers, 20, Howe ave., South Boston, and John Gilpin, 22, East Seventh st., South Boston.

China Flood Dead Reaches Thousands

Shanghai, Aug. 26 (AP)—Authoritative estimates of the death toll from floods in Central China still were lacking today, but unofficial figures placed the loss of life at 25,000 to 200,000 in Hupeh Province alone.

Patrick J. Hurley, United States Secretary of War, from a tower of the Cathay Hotel watched the rushing Whangpoo river overflow the bund. He arrived yesterday in the midst of the typhoon, but reviewed a battalion of United States marines despite the weather.

Malden City Fathers Are Batted Out at Meeting--and How!

Dodging brickbats, verbal—that's an old political custom. But Malden city councilors today were regaling their friends with stories about how they dodged some real bats last night.

A minority of two, the bats, swirling in through an open window of the council chamber in City Hall, broke up the meeting.

Chairman Frank A. Gass and assistant clerk Bessie L. Holden came nearest being caressed by them. Then somebody switched off the lights and the bats departed. Not by the window, however.

They batted around the corridors for a while and then invaded a meeting of the board of health, presided over by Dr. Carroll C. Burpee.

AMERICAN GIRL JOINS GANDHI

Ahmedabad, India, Aug. 26 (AP)—Foreshadowing the pleasures of the world, Miss Nilla Cram Cook, daughter of the late George Cram Cook, American poet and playwright, has joined Mahatma Gandhi's movement for the liberation of India.

She is the first American to be admitted to his "Ashram," or model city, conducted by India's holy man on the banks of the sacred Sbarmati river. She arrived here recently from Greece, where she played prominent parts in the Delphic festival and where her father died among the shepherds of Mount Parnassus.

For two years Miss Cook, who is only 21, has lived in a convent to prepare herself for the life. She will lead as a member of Gandhi's sisterhood. She will have as a companion Miss Madeline Slade, the Mahatma's English attendant and disciple.

Kidnaper of Tots by Air in Hiding

Lone Pine, Cal., Aug. 26 (AP)—A thorough search of the desert and mountain area near here failed to give a clue today to the whereabouts of Henry Billingsley, who Monday kidnaped his two sons in an airplane stolen at Bishop, Cal., and landed the ship on a dry lake near here. He is estranged from his wife.

Sheriff Tom Hutchinson said he would abandon the hunt here and request authorities in Los Angeles and Bakersfield, Cal., to make a check of rooming houses and hotels.

HULTMAN SEES COPS' JUDGE

Police Commissioner Hultman and Judge Perrins of West Roxbury court conferred today in the matter of two police officers of the Hyde Park station, arraigned in the court Tuesday on attack charges brought by a young Roslindale woman.

Hultman visited the judge in his lobby and remained for almost an hour. It was learned that the commissioner sought the court testimony for use in the trial board hearings of the two suspended patrolmen, John Davy and Roland J. Kinsman.

Following the story of Mrs. Evangeline Fellowes, who testified she had been attacked by the two officers in a Roslindale quarry, Judge Perrins took the motion for warrants against Davy and Kinsman under advisement.

Hultman said, following the conference, that he would decide today whether the suspended officers should answer charges before a trial board.

RADIO RUMORS RIFE

Studio Gossip Dominates News

By N. F. T.

This happens to be another of those days when rumors come to a certain overloaded desk faster than they can be verified. A few appear to be fairly well founded, so what is there to do but pass them along.

• • •

First of all, one that you won't read anywhere else is to the effect that Doreen (WNAC) Glover is being seriously considered for a personal stage appearance, when Micky Alperts' Blue Heaven Boys go theater, during the week of September 5.

• • •

ATTRACTING ATTENTION

Allen and Albee, formerly the "Twin Tipplers" will have two listeners (a good many more of course) who will be interested from the standpoint of sponsoring the boys commercially. Their debut on WEEI is at 5:20 p. m. Friday.

• • •

While ear cuppers are all enthused over the new studio star, Bing Crosby, a young lady staff member of your favorite newspaper merely yawns. She comes from way out West and knew the young man when his singing was something folks didn't care for at all. That should encourage our local crop considerably.

• • •

News flashes by The Globe Trotter are being eliminated tonight, so Gerry Harrison can broadcast the Ernie Schaaf-Vitorio Campollo boxing bout, taking place at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn. Promptly at 10 o'clock, Gerry will rebroadcast returns from the WAAB studios at the Buckminster Hotel.

• • •

• • •

Edward G. Robinson ("Little Caesar" to you), on WBZ last night with The Masked Reporter, was genuinely dumbfounded at the actual knowledge of underworld goings on, as revealed by the newspaper mystery man during the period. So was everybody else, and how!

• • •

BIG JOB AHEAD

Radio will more than likely have a czar this year, one who will occupy the same position of Judge Landis in baseball's bailiwick and Will Hays in the screen world. Guess who is strongly hinted for the job? James J. Walker, mayor (nearly wrote formerly ahead of that name), in the city called New York.

• • •

Did you read where Steve once said Morton Downey was a comer? Just imagine how everlastingly grateful Morton must feel about it, but don't let anybody tell you Steve was alone in that prediction. Speaking of comers, aren't we all? Well, most of us then, anyway.

• • •

Looks like the St. Louis Cardinals and Connie Mack's Athletics for our radio World Series menu—eh?

• • •

WNAC has a letter from an applicant who read about Lee Le Mieux, the sensational "female baritone." This ambitious creature claims to be a "male soprano," hailing from Moosup, Connecticut . . . he further states he is the talk of the town, which we don't doubt for a minute.

"On the Air"

CBS adds two announcers to its staff, Fred Uttal and Carlyle Stevens, N. Y. C. boys . . . Walter Winchell, a columnist, will be master of ceremonies for a new CBS feature to start Sept. 15 . . . The p'gram will rival the NBC Sat. Night Club. Such guest artists at Etting, Ziegfeld, Richman, La Morgan, Frances Williams and Phil Baker, will be heard . . . Frankie Frisch, St. Louis Cardinal captain, will take things for granted when he tells Arthur Crowley what his team will do in the World Series, WBZ at 7:15 this eve . . . Ray Perkins joins the personnel of the Frigidairians with the next Monday offering WEEI at 7:30 . . . Weber and Fields will be heard with the B. A. Rolfe p'grams not only on Sat. but each Tues. and Thurs. as well . . . The Melody Moments p'gram inaugurates a new policy on Sept. 2 when in place of a page and a half of advertising comment, a four line statement announcing the sponsor's newspaper advertisements will be heard.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, U. S. senator from N. Y., widely-known opthalmologist and Evening American writer, will start a CBS series Sept. 3 . . . She was born Lee Le Mieux, but WNAC likes Lee Le May better. And please don't call Lee a contralto; she's a baritone . . . Floyd Gibbons' hair will probably gray on account of this one. John S. Young, who subbed for Floyd on his Sat. p'gram, read the latter's seven minute talk in five minutes . . . The Metropolitan stage show returns to WBZ Monday at 11:30. Leading the talent to the mike is Sammy Liner and Sid Reinherz and "The Two Arthurs." . . . Nick Lucas sings two tunes o'er WNAC at 10 tonight . . . River music is the feature over WEEI at 8:30.

Ted Husing, who totes 100 lbs. of amplifier around with him on special event b'dcasts sighs enviously. NBC has perfected a miniature amplifier to be used for special b'dcasts . . . Duties of a Washington newspaper correspondent will be told by B. N. Timmons on "Going to Press" WAAB at 6 tonight . . . Those who watched Benny Leonard televised by CBS last week assert the feature which stood out most clearly before the apparatus was his bald spot . . . After being held up and robbed in their own apartment and remaining seven hours in an elevator, stuck between floors, Ruth Ann Watson, NBC contralto, decided she needed protection and got married lastly.

Man About Town

—By AL DUFFY—

"THUMBING"

Hitch-hikers in the West are known as "Hoover tourists." So reports a departed Bostonian, formerly of State st., who has been touring extensively a la Hoover for the past 12 months or more. But the chauffeurs are becoming more and more chary, he has noticed. He prophesies that within six months a hiker will have to hike. It will be impossible for him to bum a ride. He found going West much more difficult than coming East on a recent round-trip coast-to-coast excursion. He advises inaugurating courses in freight hopping and rod-riding in all institutions of higher learning.

• • •

Joe Goldberg, Publix house manager, was held up and robbed of $40 the other day. There's something wrong there that demands an investigation. Imagine anyone in show business these days with $40!

• • •

MEMORY TEASERS

DO YOU REMEMBER WHEN—

Pat Crowe and the Cudahy kidnaping case were Page One news?

"A bicycle built for two" was more than a song, and filled a need almost every Saturday afternoon?

Drug stores advertised "fine wines and whiskies for medicinal purposes only?"

The young beaux who visited country fairs all wore celluloid buttons with such devil-may-care mottoes as "Kiss me; nothing makes me sick," and "How'd you like to be my girl?"

The first of November was—for the people who had one—the date "to put the car up for the winter?" And, at about the same time, mother added another petticoat to the already large collection in daily use

You invariably greeted the fortunate—and experimental-minded—friend with, "How do you like your telephone?"

• • •

THE MORNING MAIL

Buggie, Boston: Some fun, hey kid? I've missed you so hurry up and get well.

Ex-Barkeep, Winthrop: Thankee for them kind words. Good letter; come again.

Lee Anderson, Milford, N. H.: Present company is always excepted, you know. When it's natural, that's a different story. Drop in again some time.

Billie, Boston: Welcome home. I'm from Missouri about that recipe, and where do they get the dough to keep two apartments, let alone one?

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

Emile Coulon tried to get either Guy Lombardo or Ben Bernie to open his new Seaglades in the Westminster on September 17 . . . No luck, though, they wanted too much dough . . . And had you heard that Morton Downey, Tony Wons and Jacques ("Man About Ton") Renard will be on hand to reopen the Mayfair? . . . The story is that they'll come up here for a week or two and broadcast their Camel programs from Boston . . . And when they return to New York, they say that Ranny Weeks will be the maestro of the Mayfair band . . . Mickey Alpert played a dance date in Old Orchard last Friday and when he arrived at the casino he saw the following in electric lights over the door:

"MICKEY ALPERT ANYBODY'S WOMAN"

It seems that they also show a feature picture at the casino in addition to the dancing . . . But for a minute Mickey was worried . . . James Cagney and Warner Brothers are tiffing . . . Omigawd, musical pictures are coming back! . . . I thought we had heard the last of theme songs . . . Leslie Banks—he was here last year in "The Man In Possession," remember?—is on the high seas, bound for the U. S. and the winter theatrical season . . . So is Phil Baker, who will probably go on tour with "Crazy Quilt," Billy Rose's revue . . . Norma Talmadge, who was supposed to have retired permanently from the movies, will make a talkie for MGM . . . Just to give you an idea how tough show business has been, may we report that Jed Harris, who has had as many hits as any of the producers these past few years, is now running around N. Y. in a Ford? . . . "Variety" this week devotes a column to an amusing description of a "Boston lady writer" (presumably Elizabeth Borton of the Herald) cross-examining Gary Cooper about his romance with Lupe Velez . . . Lupe, by the way, and Lawrence Tibbett are all agog . . . Cornelius Vanderbilt, wearied of his many bouts with Peter Arno, has retired to a dude ranch to forget it all.

Personalities

MORTON DOWNEY is losing weight . . . And so is GEORGE BEUCHLER . . . But not KATE SMITH . . . TED WEEMS and BEN BERNIE both studied engineering, but "they had rythm" . . . SINGIN' SAM wanted to be a pianist. His father wanted him to be a violinist. So he became a singer . . . IRENE BEASLEY is writing a book . . . And RAY PERKINS will write a column for a magazine . . . B. A. ROLFE is an ardent student of criminology . . . JACK MILES, CBS orch. leader, is the only musician who played for GUY LOMBARDO that is no longer with him . . . Announcer ANDRE BARUCH is studying the care and feeding of the alligator . . . MILLER and LYLES are going back on the stage . . . "Wine bricks" may go on the air . . . BEN ALLEY is on the CBS injured list, the result of a sting of a bee . . . TONY WONS spends his spare time in New York night courts . . . Advance reports from Atlantic City hint that RUDY VALLEE, as one of the stars of "Scandals," croons, plays the saxophone but doesn't act.

WHY DO SONGS LIVE OR QUICKLY DIE?

—By Gilbert Seldes—

ENOUGH SERIOUS THINKERS have tried in their time to discover what makes a popular song popular; most of them, song writers themselves, confess they do not know the answer, but when they hit on a turn in melody, or a happy phrase which captivates the public, they imagine they have found the formula for success. Then something like the Banana Song arrives and explodes all theories. You can only say that if a song is to be popular it must be fairly easy to hum or whistle, and the words must not be too obscure. Melodies from Beethoven to Schumann have served the purpose of Tin Pan Alley and syncopation, which horrifies the musical pedants, has also served—so nothing can be learned in that direction.

GILBERT SELDES

There is another problem which I tackled several years ago (with not much success) and which returns to me on looking over James J. Geller's book of "Famous Songs and Their Stories," which Macauley has just published. It is: What makes a song unpopular; why are popular songs forgotten? My original answer was that they are never forgotten, except in public. Styles change, and people would be embarrassed if they were caught whistling last year's tune; it is a social error to ask the orchestra at a night club to play "The Siren Song" when everyone else wants to hear "My Canary Has Circles Under His Eyes," although "The Siren Song" is a hundred times better. We live in the illusion that our pet songs are not as sweetly sentimental as the songs of the past and leave to drunkards and close harmonists the songs of sadness and mother love, while our hearts break over "Love for Sale," torch songs and laments for the hard lot of the gigolo.

• • •

Rough Humor

Mr. Geller's book, which is full of illuminating incidents about the songs—how they were inspired and what they meant originally—has the words and music of the great hits of the past 40 years. They constitute a history of the nation, a record of changes in thoughts and feelings; and at the same time they suggest that certain attitudes are always with us. One of them is a kind of ribald humor, which you find in the 1880's in "Where Did You Get That Hat?" in "Throw Him Down, McCloskey" in the next decade, in "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now," at the turn of the century. On the other hand, a song about a wayward girl, if you can imagine one being popular today, would be brutal and sarcastic, and not like "The Picture That Is Turned Toward the Wall":

"There's a name that's never spoken, and a mother's heart half broken,
There is just another missing from the old home, that is all;
There is still a mem'ry living, there's a father unforgiving,

Three Immortals

We aren't likely to take this sort of thing to our hearts now, but why do we throw out of our memory songs which still are in the current style? Publishers of music say that we tire of songs when we hear them too often, and that the habit of broadcasting has reduced the life of a song from a year to three months. Presumably we play them and sing them not for their virtues, but because everyone else is playing and singing them, and "The Wadding of the Painted Doll" can make us forget the masterpieces of Berlin and Gershwin and Kern.

Each of these three men has contributed one song near the beginning of his career ("Alexander's Ragtime Band," "The Siren Song," "Swanee") which deserves immortality, and each was repeated, after a lapse of years ("What'll I Do?" "Old Man River," and for Gershwin, his next hit). I'd rather hear them this minute than all of the popular music I've heard this year.

The Wind in the City

The wind is sad in the city;
She grieves for a place to go,
And searches streets and byways
For scenes she used to know.

She who was born of heaven,
Who raced with cloud and rain,
Trails the streets like a strumpet,
Yearning for freedom in vain.

Could only she scale the high walls
That prison the fetid crowd,
She would run to the breast of an oak tree
Or hide her face in a cloud.

Other Men's Ideas

FROM "Cruelty to Words," by Ernest Weekly (Dutton's):

"We are told by the biographer of that fine little literary craftsman, C. E. Montague, that 'he came to hate a bad sentence like a bad smell and to revel in a good one as he might in a rose.' Ability to write good sentences, i. e., to write with a formal perfection which invites the reader to revel, is given to few and can hardly be acquired.

"The great prose writer is born, not made. Ability to write sentences that do not sin against clearness, logic and grammatical usage is within the power of every being gifted with normal intelligence and a conscience. Anatole France recognized three essential qualities in good French prose—'D'abord la clarte, puis encore la clarte, et enfin la clarte.'

"That writer is conscienceless who fails to read over carefully each paragraph he has composed and to ask himself sternly, 'Is this clear?' "

"As a singer he was fine, but as a lo ver, I could have done better myself."

Hate Tunney

—By Deems Taylor—

THE SPORTS WRITERS are after Gene Tunney again. The other day one of them pitched into him to the tune of a solid column of irony and disparagement, inspired, apparently, by Tunney's use of the word "subconscious" in an interview. He seemed to feel that such words were a bit obscene on the lips of an ex-prize fighter.

Accordingly, in eight or nine hundred words, he gave the reader a chance to deduce (a) that Mr. Tunney is a seriously under-educated person who uses words far above his station; (b) that he is not exceptionally gifted as a pugilist; and (c) that he went down for a count of 14 seconds in his last fight with Mr. Dempsey.

• • •

I do not know Mr. Tunney very well. I once heard him make a speech and listened to him talk to Charles Hanson Towne afterward. What little I saw of him seemed likeable. He appeared to be an earnest, somewhat humorless young man, very self-confident professionally and rather diffident otherwise; a young man possessed, one would say, of a good mind, which he is at present applying to belles lettres and culture in general with the same seriousness and thoroughness that he formerly gave to boxing.

Nevertheless, he is not popular among that group of vicarious athletes that is known as the Sporting Element. The fans wish him ill with startling enthusiasm;

Consider the famous "long count" episode, for example. In the second of their two battles Dempsey knocked Tunney down with considerable emphasis. Under the rules, the former should immediately have gone to a neutral corner to await the count. Dempsey was slow in going, and the referee accordingly waited until he did go before commencing the count." It is highly probable, therefore, that when Tunney rose at the official count of nine the actual elapsed time was fourteen seconds.

And that is what the average sports writer still points out. What he does not point out is, first, that in delaying the count the referee was doing his duty; and, second, that if Tunney had not waited until the last possible second before getting up, he would have been a fool.

There are several possible reasons. The first is that instead of fighting Dempsey to a finish, and knocking him out, as all previous challengers had done to all previous champions, Tunney fought a specified, limited number of rounds, and won on a decision. This is not exactly his fault. I imagine that he would have been delighted to fight Dempsey until one or the other was unconscious, had not the law decreed otherwise. But, his fault or not, he gets the blame.

Tunney's second sin was that of flouting tradition. Theoretically, professional boxing is a pure sport, indulged in by heroes whose sole incentive is the glory of battle and whose financial gains are the unsought rewards of a doughty warrior. Actually, of course, professional boxing—or, as it is still, romantically called, the Fight Game—is a branch of big business, whose devotees are actuated by a wholly uncomplicated desire to make as much money as possible with the least possible expenditure of time and money.

Unmask Washington

—By Charles Hanson Towne

THAT ANONYMOUS PURVEYOR of gossip, the author of "The Mirrors of Washington," is back again this year with a tome which will set the American people agog. It is called "The Mirror of 1932," and Brewer, Warren & Putnam are the publishers.

Charles Towne

As a nation, we have little loyalty. We forget—and we forgive—too readily and too soon. The idol of yesterday is the condemned nobody of tomorrow.

A friend of mine has invented a parlor game which is great sport, but has in it an element of cruelty. He calls it "Hasbeens," and the idea is that each player, with a pencil and paper, must think of some first page politician or actress or literary light of a few years back who is now on the way to oblivion. The player writing down the greatest number of such people wins. Perfect examples are Red Grange and "Peaches" Browning. I dare not go further. But try it some evening when things grow dull. The volume before me might contain some possibilities; but I will only say that John Barleycorn is not one of them. He will be first page news until you and I are under green sods.

Hoover's Weakness

This book makes delectable reading. It is dotted with epigrams and sharp, caustic witticisms. It is at once cruel and kind. But it is never dull.

Ten national figures are analyzed and tried as by fire. Most of them are found sadly lacking. Hoover's inability to make and hold friends is made manifest, and if you have forgotten that he was once a Democrat, you will be reminded of it here. His weakness, according to this critic, lies essentially in the fact that he was not a "swimming hole kid." There may be more wisdom in that comment than would at first appear.

Al Smith has gone high-hat, says the book. He left Perry st. and the sidewalks of New York for Park ave. and the Biltmore Hotel. When he was running for President, "the country could not see the statesman for the showman." And "Al is too human and not enough of a humanist." If a man may be known by his enemies, it will be revealing to learn that Tammany Hall hates Al Smith. So does Mayor Walker and John Francis Curry. But he is loved by Raskob. So we must judge him ourselves in the light of these revelations.

Coolidge's Long Doze

Of Coolidge we hear that "the Presidency was a delightful daze and doze" to him. He loafed on his job, for he loved people so much that he often continued a conference with a long chat on non-essentials. His luck was so extraordinary that his nomination for the Vice-Presidency was humorously reported to have induced Mr. Harding to double his life insurance policy. But one feels that the author of this book rather likes and admires Mr. Coolidge, though he says of him at the end that "he snoozes and sits, resting on his morals." An epigram worthy of Alice Longworth.

Owen D. Young, we are informed, "concedes his total lack of qualifications for the Presidency. Of the proposal to place him in the White House he says:

" 'To administer political affairs successfully requires political knowledge and political experience. I have neither. I have never taken a job for which my experience did not in some degree qualify me, and I hope I never may.' "

It may be rather absurd to attribute a man's lack of success to his lack of height, as is done in the case of Newton D. Baker. Has this author forgotten Napoleon? Baker, says this author, "has the head of a George Bernard Shaw and the physique of an undersized undergraduate; it gives him the appearance of topheaviness."

Yet "he is by far the ablest candidate for the Presidency in the two major parties."

Others who are either assailed or praised are Franklin D. Roosevelt, Dwight Morrow, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Albert C. Ritchie and Gifford Pinchot.

HAVE YOU BEEN TO THE OYSTER HARBOR CLUB at Osterville on the Gold Coast of the Cape? Very ultra and very exclusive! The show place of this vicinity is that of the A. Felix Du Ponts, where the wedding of the young son of the House of Du Pont to Miss Hoyt of New York and Marion will take place on Saturday.

* * *

MRS. TALBOT

THESE YOUNG PEOPLE HAVE been playmates during the summer for years and the culmination of the romance is no surprise to their friends. There has been a constant round of house parties all summer, and one meets people from everywhere as both families are almost international in their contacts.

* * *

THE HOUSE IS ENORMOUS and very beautiful in spite of its size. They have boathouses, garages and hangars and the proper question at breakfast is: "How are you going to New York this morning, by motor, yacht or plane?" Thank Heaven, we do not have to decide such momentous questions this hot weather—as long as the old Buick holds together.

* * *

Du Pont Home Opened for Charity Sale

MRS. DU PONT IS VERY PHILANTHROPIC AND opened her house this summer for a sale to benefit the Children's Aid Society. Everyone went—you bet! Their gardens are superb. Other lovely gardens in that vicinity are those of Mrs. Fritz Talbot, Mrs. Chauncy Parker and the Days.

* * *

THESE PLACES ARE ALL along the G. C., touching the oh so exclusive skirts of the Oyster Harbor Club. Across the Bay is St. Mary's Island, which faces the club. The Andrew Wilsons of New York have a lovely place on the island. This little resort colony has the air of a fascinating rendezvous in the south of France. The South Shore gains each year in things to see, hear and tell.

* * *

THE FREDERIC WHITWELLS are much missed along this popular coast line this summer. Count Pierre has a new and charming Italian Villa at Wianno. You will remember he married a Miss Horner of New York, whose brother, Jack Horner, adds a little CRUST to every party and is quite a plum for a' that. Pierre is a REAL Count, which counts for a lot wherever he turns up. He and his Countess are music lovers and their large music room lends itself perfectly for their frequent musicales.

* * *

Channing Wells Back

EVERYONE IS GLAD TO have the Channing Wells back from Europe. Mother is quite as beautiful and popular as daughter, Elizabeth. They are both enthusiasts, and that is a quality to be desired in these depressing times.

* * *

Miss Wells

VICTORIA WESSON is up in the air. As you have already guessed, she hails from Springfield and Cotuit and Wesson ammunition. She has a beautiful plane, and is no longer contented on earth. Her brother was graduated from St. Paul's this spring and will enter Harvard next month. He is as keen on horses as sister is on flying. Miss Wesson has been a frequent visitor at the Murchies in Dedham, where there are two eligibles.

* * *

AND SPEAKING OF THE MURCHIES, we hear that "Queen Anne" has returned from Europe, where she has taken the "reducing baths" and is appearing quite girlish again. And that Mrs. Conover Fitch, who has been supervising the "Studio" during her absence, is visiting Mrs. Sohier Shaw at North East Harbor. Apropos of all of this, Mrs. Ellery Clark has been quite ill this summer at her apartment at 60 Commonwealth Avenue and will spend the fall at their country place at Cohasset recuperating. In spite of history, the "Queen" can do some wrong we hear.

* * *

Beach Club Dinners

BARBARA BREMER HAS been visiting Charlotte Lyman at Islesboro and we saw her at Cohasset recently, looking very pretty indeed. A tan is quite becoming. Her popular mother—everyone seems to like Mary Bremer—is one of the young who have young ideas and played in the tennis finals at the Cohasset tournament.

* * *

FARTHER DOWN ON THE Cape, the Plymouth Beach Club is in full swing. Many dinners have been given there these past few weeks by the Stricklands, Hornblowers and Torbets. Alice Burrage, deb of last season, has been seen there frequently. Her parents, the C. V. Burrages, are at Kingston this summer. And the Austin Cheneys of South Manchester, Ct., have taken a house at Yarmouth with their three daughters. Their oldest daughter, Ruth, who married in June, motors down with her husband, Dr. Reynolds, for weekends.

Mlle. Paulette, who recently enacted the part of Joan of Arc in a pageant, has lost her reason. Read how this all happened in the American Weekly in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

* * *

HOWARD WHITESIDE found Wareham a little dull—and who can blame him? He is on a hike out West. Go West, young man, and sometimes young lady. Nancy Crocker, who went West and decided to stay there with her cowboy husband, has been back, for a visit we hope. These Boston girls sometimes surprise us.

Dressy Wraps for Evening

By ANN ARDEN

FROM THE little short evening jacket with scarcely a note of decoration about it we now are about to jump into the extreme of very dressy wraps for the same purpose.

* * *

PARIS HAS announced every intention of making the coming wraps for evening long, even as long as the dresses themselves. They will be bordered and banded with fur just as heavily as the personality and the purse can stand. They will be shaped and fitted to the figure. They will, in short, contain quantities of sumptuous materials.

* * *

THE QUEENLY look that you hear so much about in connection with women of an older day, promises to be paramount as far as evening wraps are concerned. Materials will be Lyons velvet of the finest quality and chiffon velvet heavily lined and padded.

* * *

OF COURSE, there will be survivals of the shorter jacket—these for wear with certain sorts of evening gowns which they exactly suit. But these, too, will be bordered by wide fur bands.

* * *

IT LOOKS as though the naive simplicity of the past summer with regard to wraps of this sort will be entirely a past note. So get out your furs and plan to use every inch of them for winter grandeur.

* * *

BLACK transparent velvet fashions the wrap pictured, having the wide shoulder and slim body lines of the new season. Shirring from a point center back gives a yoke effect, and extends over shoulders continuing down outer edge of sleeves. The wrap is heel length in back, slightly cut-away toward front edge, and lined in white satin. The white fur collar tapers to a point at the fitted waistline.

* * *

IT IS worn with a black satin evening gown, topped in white satin, with buckle of turquoise and brilliants, repeated in the filigree earrings. Silver strap slippers continue the contrast idea.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American, the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WAAB.

LOVE'S CALL DOOMS ANNUAL BACHELOR DANCES AT MYOPIA

Survivors to Gather at Party

Every year about this time a group of men used to give a bachelor's dance at the Myopia Hunt Club in Hamilton. As each August came around, more and more of their number were caught by the matrimonial urge, and were tied up. For instance, one or two who have given up single blessedness and who have been among this group ever since being graduated from college are Forrester A. Clark, known as "Tim," who forfeited bachelorhood to the charming Katherine Burrage last June, and Mr. Dudley Pickman, who did the same for Mrs. Cochrane.

So this year there are really so few unmarried men around Boston and its summer colonies that they have given it up, though instead Mr. William H. Coolidge of Manchester, will be host to a number of friends on Friday evening the 28th. This will include many who would otherwise attend the bachelor affair, and makes everyone happy.

Filene Favors High Wages

Amsterdam, Aug. 26 (AP)—Scientific mass production and distribution of goods aiming at higher wages and lower prices, will raise the standard of living and restore the prosperity of capital and labor, Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, told the World Social Economic Congress today.

Mr. Filene denounced mergers and cartels directed at artificial maintenance of high prices as "short-sighted and in the end destructive of profits."

He described the present high tariff of the United States as "the tariff of the unsuccessful, passed apparently in response to the demands of the inefficient against the protests of the efficients."

The seeming paradox of high wages and low prices, he explained, could be made possible through mass production and mass distribution, but he differentiated between mass production and mass distribution and mere large scale production and large scale distribution.

"Wages, which means buying power, should in every industry be raised as high as possible without increasing the cost of the product."

4-MINUTE MEN DUE BACK IN AID DRIVE

Washington, Aug. 26 (INS). The driving power which made campaigns for funds during the World War a remarkable success throughout the country will again be brought into play when all America is asked to give for relief of the needy unemployed during the period October 19-November 25 inclusive.

The spearhead of the drive will be Walter S. Gifford, director of the new committee on unemployment relief formed by President Hoover in an effort to provide for the needy without calling upon the Federal government for direct relief appropriation.

BEAT CONGRESS

The campaign will be concluded a month before Congress meets, when there is certain to be a hard battle for Federal participation in the nation's emergency relief measures.

The amount to be sought in the campaign could not be fixed at the conference at which the dates were agreed upon. For the next two weeks Director Gifford plans an intensive survey to determine what is necessary. Some estimates have placed the amount at not less than $250,000,000.

STIMULATE LOCAL WORK

The work of Gifford, he emphasized upon taking office, will be to stimulate and co-ordinate local relief activities. The October drive has been described as a national drive for local funds.

National radio hookups will be employed, aid of newspapers sought and the Four-Minute Men of World War days may be called into action again.

GANGMEN WARN RADIO MAN

"You're a wise guy," said a voice sounding like that of a young man.

"Your life might be worth only two cents to you, but it's worth thousands to NBC. We'll teach you wise guys to keep out of these gangster affairs," the speaker continued.

Young, believing it was one of his friends attempting a joke, cut off the conversation by hanging up. Ten minutes later another call came in. It was a different voice, a[illegible] that of a young man. It conveyed the [illegible] message with embellishment.

ELY WRONG ON ALIEN LAW, SILVERMAN SAYS

Couple, 84, Sweethearts Since Childhood, to Wed

THIS IS LIFE

WILL MACHINERY OF OUR CIVILIZATION DESTROY US?

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

OLD HENRY ADAMS would have felt tickled, so far as that somewhat remote and impersonal intelligence could have felt tickled, at James Truslow Adams' article in this September Harpers Magazine on "The Tempo of American Life."

ROBERT E. ROGERS

It is a platitude, of course, to say that New York moves faster than Boston, or that London is slower than Chicago, or that all America has the habit of git-up-and-git to an extent which Europe cannot understand. New Yorkers, we are told, feel that the only good thing in Boston is the 5 o'clock train to New York, but all non-New Yorkers have one unfailing formula: "I like to spend a few days in New York, but I could never stand living there." Thick-skinned as most New Yorkers are that remark always faintly disturbs them.

But James Truslow Adams is interested in more fundamental things, in the growing acceleration of the tempo of the world, as recorded on the ticker tape of history. Henry Adams, historian and philosopher, had the same preoccupation. He had a conviction that most historical writing was born of prejudice and unfulfilled wishes and the like, and no one knew history better than he! He tried to find a scientific law for historians. You will find it stated in a posthumous volume misnamed by his brother, Brooks Adams, "The Degeneration of the Democratic Dogma."

Is the World Running Down?

Henry tried it twice. Once he believed that history could be explained in terms of the running down of the clock, as Sir James Jeans seems to believe now. Every advance in human reason and spirit, thought Henry, had been made at the expense of vital energy. Eventually, when the universe had expended all it had to expend, the rest would be silence and stagnation. Already, he believed, man had better brains but less vital energy than his ancestors. We and the world are running down.

His other theory was that the universe is obeying some kind of law like that by which ice turns into water and water into gas, the law of phase. He calculated it in terms of speed, on the theory of inverse squares.

He calculated our mechanical age roughly from 1600 to 1900, some 300 years. On that basis the non-mechanical age must have lasted 90,000 years. And the electrical age would last only as the square root of 300, or up to 1917, when a new age would begin, which would come to an end in 1921, which would be the end of possible acceleration.

He acknowledged quite frankly that an error of a hundred years here and there did not matter. In spite of our increasing acceleration, we might not see the end of progress until the year 2000 or thereabouts.

The chariot endured thousands of years before it was replaced by the steam locomotive. After only 75 years, electricity began to take the place of coal and steam. The life of the electric trolley was barely 30 years before the automobile seriously displaced it; the automobile had hardly lasted a score of years before people began to fly almost as a matter of course. The Italian competitors for the Schneider Cup, as the papers said the other day, are thinking of a speed of 700 miles an hour. The world has been circled in eight days. And yet compared to the twinkling with which sight and sound circle it, there remains a good deal of acceleration still possible. And soon, very soon, Henry Adams believed we should reach the limit of our acceleration and find ourselves stagnant for an indefinitely long period.

Pace Grows Faster and Faster

James Truslow Adams, one of our most stimulating historians of today, has seriously criticised Adams' assumptions, but they still fascinate him. In his Harpers article, he shows that without question there is some kind of a law of acceleration at work. Houses that used to last a century are pulled down in a score of years. A book is almost forgotten after a year or two. The radio exhausts a popular song in six weeks. Crazes in games, amusements, activities, ideas, spring up out of nowhere, overrun the country like a prairie fire and die, never to be heard of again.

The history of the past measured civilizations by the hundreds of years. Since the Civil War an entirely new civilization such as the world had never seen before has grown up and flourished in the United States. In the decade since the end of the war even that has been so modified as to be almost a new civilization. Are we already in a new phase of acceleration? Or did the smash of 1929 mark the climax and end of that period, and are we due for a long period of slowing down, if not actual stagnation? It seems not unlikely. History has known before now these breathing spells between spurts of energy.

Mr. James Truslow Adams (no relation, by the way, to Henry, though he has written a standard book about the great Adams family) is particularly interested in our human capacity to adapt ourselves to all this inevitable acceleration. If we can adapt ourselves we may win out; if we fail, acceleration may ruin us as it has ruined civilizations before.

* * *

Our Only Salvation

The elder generation, he thinks, has failed utterly to orient itself. Only the younger generation will be able to establish a new law of living in the midst of the hurly-burly, and try consciously to build up a reasonable, leisurely, self-controlled kind of life in the mist of all this temptation of rapid centrifugal action.

> "For this I think we can look only, or mainly, to the younger generation among the privileged classes. I use the whole phrase advisedly . . . On the other hand, the lower or under-privileged classes (I use the term in no snobbish sense) are everywhere and in all countries too dazzled by their new toys and new power, too confused by their new wealth of sensation, too untrained in the higher values of life, to be of assistance."

Mr. Adams restates for us the old, old lesson of history. The crowd is only the material of a civilization, never its master. And only from a self-conscious, well-bred and well-educated, self-denying aristocracy may we expect any philosophy of life which shall keep this new machinery of civilization from destroying us.

BODY OF HEROIC COACH FOUND

After a fruitless all night seach by coast guardsmen, the body of Ray Comerford of West Roxbury former Dartmouth athlete and Leominster coach, who was drowned yesterday at Marshfield after rescuing a boy, was recovered early today by William Raymond and his son.

Comerford lost his life when the heavy undertow swept him beyond the reach of other swimmers, who had relieved him of the boy, when Comerford became weakened by his battle with the surf.

He is survived by four brothers James F., Matthew E., Frank L. and Joseph, all of 58 Greaton rd West Roxbury.

40,000 IN LOOT ONLY MARKS

Somewhere in the city today a "meanest thief" is gloating over a "fortune" in German marks, the property of Michael Mizr, 53, of Leverett st., West End, who "caught a few winks" this morning on a bench in Boston Common.

Mizr told police he was robbed of his wallet which contained 42 cents in American money and 40,000 German marks.

Stabbed Man Dies; Suspect Is Held

With the death of Antonio De Leo, 37, North Market st., North End, at City Hospital today, police will seek a murder warant against Dominick Gianogica, 40, Prince st., North End. De Leo died of knife wounds sustained in a fray with Gianogica a few weeks ago in Prince st., police charge. Gianogica had been charged with assault and battery with intent to kill and held in $10,000.

When De Leo was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital with stab wounds in the groin and arms, police found Gianogica in the gutter suffering from cuts about the face and arms.

PASTOR WINS GIRL HE WOOED 60 YEARS AGO

Love, Grown Cold While Each Had Twice Married, Revives in Brockton

Brockton, Aug. 26—A childhood romance that endured more than half a century despite other marriages was revealed here today with the announcement that Mrs. Elizabeth Page, 84, of Snell ave., twice widowed, but childless, would wed Rev. John Squires, also 84, of Hartford, Ct., a widower and father of six children.

The couple, who were sweethearts in their youth filed marriage intentions in Hartford last week. The wedding is to be August 31.

They had not seen each other for more than 60 years until Mrs. Page went to Hartford for a vacation three weeks ago. They met again and picked up the threads of their interrupted romance and then reached their decision to wed.

As a boy in Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, Squires drove the family mare 10 miles every day to pay court to his bride-to-be, who in her girlhood was the belle of Briceen.

When Squires went to college to study for the ministry they lost track of each other. The girl went to Boston, where she married and was widowed twice.

Meanwhile, Squires completed his studies and entered the ministry. He married in Connecticut and his wife died several years ago.

He has one daughter in Connecticut and five sons, Beaton, a Boston attorney; James of Newton, Neil of Wellesley, George of Worcester and Charles of Lynn, the two latter ministers.

DOG IN THE BAG---BUT WHY, DEAR LADY?

ACT ORIGINALLY PASSED BACK IN 1914

Boston Corporation Counsel Declares Supreme Court Has Already Ruled on It

Gov. Ely is wrong in declaring that aliens employed by the State prior to passage of Chapter 125 of the Acts of this year [illegible] from discharge, Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman said today.

In a letter to Mayor Curley the corporation counsel pointed out that the actual citizen preference has been on the books since 1914 while the measure passed this year is but an amendment to the 1914 Act.

Commenting on Gov. Ely's reply to Chairman Frank A. Goodwin of the Boston Finance Commission that the law this year is not retroactive, Atty. Silverman wrote:

"The Governor is probably of the opinion that the only legislation on the subject is that contained in Chapter 125 of the Acts of 1931. If the Governor bases his opinion on this fact, he has overlooked the provisions of a prior statute o fwhich the 1931 Act is merely an amendment.

17 YEARS AGO

"The statute giving preference to citizens over aliens was enacted over 17 years ago by the provisions of Chapter 600 of the Acts of 1914, and recodified in the General aLws, Section 13, of Chapter 31."

Counsel Silverman said the Supreme Court has ruled in the case of Lee v. the City of Lynn, that city officials were required to discharge aliens already employed and substitute citizens.

The 1931 act should be construed as retroactive "in its force and effect." Silverman declared.

"By its terms," he said, "in every position, employment and work in any branch of the government in Massachusetts, citizens should be given preference over aliens."

Recently a number of alien nurses employed at the Boston City Hospital were discharged following a ruling by Corporation Counsel Silverman that Chapter 3 of the General Laws calling for preference for citizens in all public employment, required that noncitizen employes should be dismissed whenever citizens were seeking employment.

NURSES DISCHARGED

In accordance with this ruling Mayor Curley, although expressing his regret that he was obliged to do so, directed Dr. John Dowling of the City Hospital to dismiss about 29 nurses who were not citizens of the country.

At that time City Councillor Dowd wrote a letter to Governor Ely asking that alien nurses and others employed in State departments should be dismissed to make room for citizens anxious for employment.

PROBATION FOR BOOK THIEF

Manuel Perlstein, 20, of Vine st., Lynn, who admitted he stole books from the Lynn Public Library in order to prepare himself for "higher education" in college, was given a two months' suspended sentence today by Judge Reeve in Lynn court.

The youth, who took 80 books, valued at $400, was also ordered to pay $25 court costs and was placed on probation.

"In stealing books," Judge Reeve told Perlstein, "you were doing the very thing that would keep you from getting into a college."

WATER IS NECESSARY AND IT WON'T ADD WEIGHT

Necessary for Proper Body Functioning, Dr. Wynne Points Out

Health Commissioner Shirley W. Wynne of New York remarks today that he wishes his duties gave him time to answer all the letters in connection with weight reduction which he has received through the Evening American.

"I want to help people as much as I can," he declares. "But I'm afraid I'll have to pick the most important questions out of the mail and answer them through the Evening American columns."

The first question, the commissioner noted, was the question of water drinking and its effect on health and weight.

"Water," he remarked, "has absolutely no fuel value. You know one trouble with a good many people is that they don't drink enough water. They seem to be afraid of it."

The commissioner pointed out that water plays an important part in the body processes.

"None of the chemical reactions of the body can take place without water," he observed "Water also helps to carry off the waste products of the body."

Several readers wrote to ask Dr Wynne if going without lunch would hurt them.

"Not at all," the doctor reassures them. "Not so long as you get enough of the right kind of food at other times."

He stressed the need for regular habits of eating, however and said that he wanted to reiterate his plea to reducers to drink enough milk.

Dr. Peabody Sails on 133d Crossing

Dr. Philip G. Peabody, Boston globe-trotter, who has already 132 transatlantic crossings to his credit, is among the passengers leaving New York today on the North German Lloyd liner Europa, bound to Cherbourg, Southampton and Bremen.

DAILY TRUE STORY

RIVER'S RETURN

IT WAS HARD TO TELL LULU SHE MUST WAIT

DAVID COLEMAN walked wearily across the parched fields with the dry blades of half-grown corn rustling in the shimmer of late August heat. He looked neither to the right nor to the left; he was sick of the sight of his burned-up fields, of the dancing heat waves rising from the dried earth.

He came to the end of the field and followed the trail through the jagged fringe of brush to the edge of the cliff, then downward from timbered ledge to ledge. Boyhood memories came to him, memories of hot August afternoons when he had stolen away from the hard labor of the poor little Ozark farm and had hurried with boyish eagerness down to the still pool of cool water in the eddy beneath the willows. He could feel the coolness of the water on his hot, dusty little body and feel the tug of the river's enchanting music that had always seemed to be calling him.

David straightened his shoulders and hurried on, his eyes fixed upon the winding blue ribbon that was the river. Reaching the willow-grown bank, he unloosed the chain of an old boat, stepped quickly into it and took up the heavy home-made paddle. With strong skillful strokes he shot out into the current and headed down stream.

Slowly his body relaxed, a look of peace spread over his young face that had before shown a look of worried determination, a look of escape. He began to whistle.

It had been hard to stick to his determination with Lulu's pleading eyes upon him, hard to tell her that she would have to wait, that he couldn't build the cabin this year, for Lulu's household gods were ready. But she would be glad, David kept telling himself, glad of the waiting when he returned with the pearls the river would surely yield him, pearls that would build, perhaps, more than a cabin, would give Lulu riches undreamed of. The land had failed him but the singing river would surely be kind.

Met Another Boat
Was Sure of His Welcome

The evening sun dropped quickly behind the bluffs that walled the river. David pulled up to a shallow bar, and making the boat secure, ate his scanty meal beneath a willow, then stretched himself upon a blanket with his face upward and watched the colors fading from the sky until all were merged into a dull amber glow that shaded upward into starlit blue. The purling water lulled his tired body to sleep.

The second day as David drifted farther and farther from it the rocky hill faded from his consciousness like a bad dream and the beauty of the river sang in his veins a song of joy and freedom.

Toward evening he sighted blue smoke rising from a clean-swept bar in a bend of the river ahead. His sore muscles suddenly responded to the eagerness within and he shot the boat forward with renewed energy. He pulled up beside another boat, a sturdy old blackened hulk that was littered with the varied paraphernalia of a river man.

The odor of boiling coffee and sizzling bacon greeted his nostrils. He hailed and an old man bending over the camp fire slowly straightened and answered the hail. It was Old Jack and David was sure of his welcome as he strode across the bar. He had known he would find the river rat somewhere down the river.

Winter had followed the autumn, spring the winter and another summer, a summer with an abundance of rain, had come and passed, and [illegible] David was searching [illegible] for the [illegible] that would build Lulu's home. In the first eager days he had hunted feverishly every daylight hour busy with the gathering of mussels into heaps upon the bar and opening them. Often he would come running into camp if Jack were in for the old man's verdict on his find and always the river man had shook his head.

The bits of slugs he had found were almost worthless. Gradually he had learned to judge for himself and came less and less often. As time passed the delights of the free life of the river lured him away from his task to go fishing with Jack, to lie for hours on hot summer afternoons in the river's coolness, to loaf about in the woods back of their camp in the early morning learning the songs of birds or gathering wild berries to add to their frugal fare.

Again the cycle of seasons passed and David had become scarcely less at home on the river than Old Jack himself. Life was gloriously free from care and toil, gloriously full of beauty and music. It was only mechanically now at times that he went on with his search. The river had worked its spell.

One autumn afternoon David had gone reluctantly to the pile of mussels he had gathered the day before. Sitting cross-legged on the bar, he opened mussel after mussel, his eyes often on the flaming colors of the bluff across the river. Suddenly he started. What was this in his hand? He sat with unbelieving eyes gazing at a large flawless stone. Something gripped the muscles about his heart, a lump rose in his throat. He did not need Old Jack's verdict, but slowly after a long time he got up and slowly stumbled across the bar to camp. The old man was dressing fish for their evening meal. Without one word David held out the gem to him. Old Jack gazed for a moment, then spoke three words, the value of the stone.

That evening the two men sat in silence before their campfire, each gazing across the river, their pipes gone dead. At last the old man rose to seek his blankets.

Started for Home
Found a New Cottage

"I s'pose ye'll be goin' tomorrow," he said as he knocked the ashes from his pipe.

"I s'pose so," David answered lifelessly.

Two days later David was nearing his father's farm in the bend of river when he saw a clearing in the woods ahead. It was on the Breedon farm. Evidently his old friend Thad Breedon had been getting married, for there in the center of the clearing stood a new cabin. David sighed and the pearl wrapped in a bit of old leather against his breast.

Dusk was settling over the hills as he drew near the cabin. He was thirsty; he would stop and ask for a drink and get news of home. Doubtless he would find bright-eyed little Minnie in the cabin. Thad had always seemed to like her best.

He stepped to the cabin door in the half light and rapped. A [illegible] came quickly from the cabin [illegible] answer to the knock. At the same instant a [illegible] from a little [illegible] in the room. David suddenly [illegible] back a pace into the gloom, for [illegible] outlined in the doorway, the baby in her arms, was [illegible] thin, worn, unkempt Lulu. In a shaking voice he asked for a drink and Lulu brought it in a gourd dipper. She scarcely looked at the man she served, being intent on stilling her child.

Slowly David drank the cool water. Slowly the ache in his breast receded. When he had finished he set the gourd on the table and into it dropped a little package wrapped in old leather, muttered something about a little gift for the baby and hurried away, away back over the path he had come, back to the singing river, whistling as he went, the long weary tramp forgotten, the vision of Old Jack eating his supper alone by the campfire drawing him like a magnet.

LONE GUNMAN IN HOLDUP

Raymond Marshall, of 33 Eastman ave., Swampscott, night watchman at the Sunbeam golf driving range on Essex st., Swampscott, was held up early today by a gunman about 25 years old.

Marshall had been on the driving range and when he entered the building he heard noises. Flashing on the lights he saw the holdup man in front of him.

The latter told Marshall to pass over the money or he would shoot him.

Marshall told him that he had no money, whereupon the gunman told Marshall to leave. A squad of Swampscott police officers was unable to find the gunman.

CRAWFORD TO SEEK JOB BACK

William Crawford, removed by Dr. George Bigelow, State Health Commissioner, as junior chemist in that department, announced today he will appeal the decision of the State Public Health Council in sustaining the action of Dr. Bigelow. The appeal will be taken to the district court.

Crawford was removed on charges that he had urged another chemist, Burn Robbins, to falsify the analysis of beer samples under promise that Burns would get $1000 for such action.

Crawford, who had charged a frameup against him, emphatically denied the accusations reiterated by Robbins on the witness stand.

Crawford was removed once before by Dr. Bigelow, following allegations that there had been falsification of analyses of liquor sent in by the Boston police, but his reinstatement was ordered after a hearing in Cambridge Municipal Court.

Claimed to have driven away after striking Frederick C. Pow, 41, of Meagher ave., Milton, in Mattapan sq., Miss Florence Spencer of 5 Columbia park, Dorchester, will appear in the Dorchester court where police will seek a complaint for hit-and-run driving.

Henry B. Doe, of Stonington, Conn., under whose license Miss Spencer is said by police to have been driving, will aso appear. Pow claimed injuries police say.

Following the accident, bystanders notified the Patrolman George H. Oliver, of the Mattapan station, who followed the machine in another car.

Miss Spencer and Doe told him that they did not know of any accident and accompanied them to the station.

'Tough Guy' Talks

Pitts Plans 3-Day 1932 Radio Show

'LITTLE CAESAR' THRILL ON AIR

Thousands of radio listeners in every section of New England thrilled to last night's broadcast on the "inside" workings of Boston's underworld as discussed by Edward G. Robinson, famed star of "Little Caesar," with the Masked Reporter of the Boston Evening American.

Intimate details of gangland activities, the stories that lie in the background of gang killings and the prediction of "more killings" before gang rule is checked, featured the revelations of this broadcast—the first of its kind ever to go on the air.

FIRST TIME AT "MIKE"

It also was the first appearance before a microphone of the great character actor whose gangster roles in screen dramas have stamped him one of the outstanding artists of the times.

He played his part like a veteran radio artist and even used the quick gestures so easily recalled from his recent masterpiece, "Smart Money."

INSIDE STORY OF GANGS

Probably the most interesting part of the program was that dealing with the "inside" story of the declaration of war between rival Boston gangs battling for control of various rackets.

"At no time and under no circumstances am I to be regarded as a stool-pigeon for the constituted authorities."

POLICE RADIO NEED AIRED

The need of short wave radio in the Boston police department was stressed by the Masked Reporter. This method of transmitting to cruising police cars and outlying stations warnings of crimes having been committed in the area has already made itself invaluable to police in other large cities, he remarked.

He urged his listeners to impress upon police authorities the necessity of such equipment in combating the ever increasing efficiency of underworld operations.

The broadcast was made possible through the co-operation with the Boston Evening American, of the RKO Keith Boston Theater management and officials of Station WBZ.

Children Stage Show

FOUR SAVED IN CAPE SURF

Four persons, one a prominent Boston doctor and another a Dorchester boy, were saved from drowning in a heavy surf that pounded Falmouth shore last night and caused several thousands of dollars damage.

Dr. Myron A. Strammer, 35, of Commonwealth ave., accompanied by a girl, were slightly injured when the doctor's speedboat was tossed onto the rocky shore by the sea.

The boat was completely wrecked but watchers on shore rushed to the aid of the couple and helped them to safety.

Both Dr. Strammer and the girl, who remained unidentified, were cut about the face and hands and bruised about the body. Strammer, it was learned at his office today, is spending a vacation in Falmouth, where he is active in yachting circles.

William Gallagher, 15, of Dorchester, with Forsyth Hanscomb of Woonsocket, R. I., clung to their overturned boat for six hours until rescued by coast guardsmen shortly before dark.

The heavy surf swamped their boat and spilled them into the sea. Both were near exhaustion when found, just ready to lose their holds on the craft.

Meanwhile, Hanscombes' mother had chartered a boat and scoured the harbor for the lads, after notifying police and the coast guard.

MORE WORK AT NAVY YARD

The arrival of the gunboat Ashville at the Charlestown navy yard for a general overhaul means an expansion of work for the mechanics and relieves a tense situation.

The board of inspection and survey from Washington, of which Rear Admiral George C. Day is president, inspected the destroyer Herbert and returned to Washington.

2 Pedestrians Hurt by Auto in Winthrop

While Sam Rosenblatt of 254 Washington ave., Chelsea, and Alex Romanow of 78 Harvard st., Everett, were walking along the Shore Drive in Winthrop last night they were struck and knocked down by an automobile said by the metropolitan police to have been operated by Edwin M. Novis of 8 Rindge Field st., North Cambridge.

They were rushed to the Winthrop Community Hospital, where Rosenblatt was suffering from cuts and abrasions of the head and face, while Romanow suffered a scalp wound and a possible concussion.

BITE OF SHARKEY'S DOG TURNS UP PROWLING EX-CONVICT

MORE BLOOD FOR PARALYSIS VICTIMS

Much more precious blood, to aid in the cure of those suffering from infantile paralysis, was gathered by the Department of Public Health doctors at the Salem Infantile Paralysis Clinic. Doctor Roy Feemster is taking blood from little Helen Deinstadt, of Beverly, while Nurse Florence Hogan assists him. Helen was found to be a perfect specimen and her blood will do much to aid two or more sufferers. (Staff photo.)

GIRL VANISHES, LEAVES $400

Miss Welch had been employed at the settlement house for the past 10 years. She earned $5 a week and examination of her savings showed she had accumulated $400.

Shortly before her disappearance she had been taken to the Psychopathic Hospital for observation, but the examination was postponed. She seemed depressed and her actions were noticed by house officials, according to Miss Ruth Clifford of Welfare House of the Florence Crittenton League in Jamaica Plain.

Miss Clifford has conducted a search for Miss Welch but admitted today she was baffled as to the woman's whereabouts.

Pedlar Oversteps His Boundary and Faces Court

In the future, when Samuel Levine, 52, of McLean st., Dorchester starts out on his daily task of peddling vegetables, he probably will go fully equipped with maps and compasses.

For it was the fact that he did not know where the town of Watertown ended and the city of Newton began that led to his appearance in the Newton court on a charge of peddling without a license.

He told the court that a patrolman stopped his team on Watertown st., Newton, he was unaware he had left Watertown. He produced a Watertown license but was informed that it was void in Newton. The case was placed on file.

HAULED BACK TO COURT AND SENT TO JAIL

Vagrant Bitten on "Squire's" Estate Has a Long Record in Middle West Prisons

Jack Sharkey's dog knows his men.

For the vagrant the dog snapped at and bit last night was identified today as Leon White, 40, with a long jail record.

As Sailor Jack sizes up his ring opponent, his dog estimated the stranger he saw about the Sharkey estate in Chestnut Hill and promptly marked him for the hospital.

In court in Newton today White worked on the sympathy of the Judge and was leaving the building having been treated leniently when his record was discovered through fingerprints. He was taken back and sentenced to the state farm for vagrancy.

PITIED BY COURT

White told Judge Bacon today that he was suffering from tuberculosis and was working his way to New Mexico. Out of pity the judge ordered the case placed on file.

White was taken to the probation office and a few minutes later Capt. Goode of the detective bureau burst into the courtroom.

"Where's that man?" he shouted to the astonished judge.

"Gone," was the answer.

"Well, get him," yelled Goode. "He's got a pip of a record," and the captain dashed outside just as White was about to leave the building.

Taken back to face Judge Bacon for the second time within a half hour, White was revealed by Goode as having served terms for burglary and larceny in Indiana, Oregon, Washington and Illinois.

ESCAPED IN ILLINOIS

In 1919 he escaped from Cook County, Ill., jail, but was recaptured to finish out a long term for burglary.

Although the Sharkey family is not at home, workmen are on the place and White assumed the family would be in, he told police. He said it was his intention to ask for food. As he approached the door a shepherd dog darted at him, inflicting a bite in his right leg.

Workmen took him to the Newton Hospital. When Motorcycle Officer Hammell of the Newton police was told of the events he arrested White.

23 NEW CASES OF PARALYSIS

Eight cases of infantile paralysis, the largest number ever reported in Boston in a single day, were filed with the State Department of Public Health today.

Of 23 new cases reported in the state Springfield had five and two each were reported from Rockland, Gardner and Uxbridge. Cambridge, Dennis, Fall River and Marion had one each.

Four cases previously reported as affected with the disease were revoked today, making the total for the past month 335 throughout the State.

Public health officials again pointed out that parents should keep children from mingling with crowds but allowing them to lead a normal out-of-door existence. Bathing is not likely to result in contraction of the disease.

28 Offer Their Blood for Infantile Serum

Springfield, Aug. 26—At the infantile paralysis clinic in Mercy Hospital today 28 former sufferers from the disease responded to the call for blood donations to be used in the preparation of anti-paralysis serum.

Dr. Harold E. Miner, local representative of the State Board of Health, was in charge of the work, assisted by two doctors assigned here by the department. Of the 28 volunteers only three were rejected.

STONE MENACES DRIVER'S SIGHT

A Malden campaign against truck drivers who overload their vehicles with loose stones, which spray out on highways, was renewed today when a motorist was seriously injured.

A stone snapping from the tire of another machine crashed through the windshield of a car driven by John Dutton of Elmwood Ave., Providence, on the turnpike.

After breaking the windshield, the stone broke Dutton's eyeglasses and drove a small piece into his eyeball. He was taken to a Boston specialist and may lose the sight of the eye.

Several truck drivers were fined recently in Malden court for littering loose stones little the streets.

Marry-Go-Round

ENGAGED GIRL RECEIVES PLENTY OF ADVICE

By HELEN ROWLAND

• • •

• • •

HELEN ROWLAND.

• • •

Use tact. Never let your husband know that you can rule him. A man, like a horse, has to be backed into the shafts before he can be driven.

• • •

Tell your husband everything. Never let him suspect you or deceiving him or he'll never trust you again.

• • •

Never tell your husband anything. Nothing charms a man like a little "mystery"; and what he doesn't know won't worry him.

• • •

Flatter your husband Feed him plenty of applesauce Fill him full of self-admiration—and what spills over is yours!

• • •

Don't flatter your husband or he'll soon begin to wonder why such a combination of brains and beauty should waste all of himself on a simple little thing like you.

• • •

Remember that you are your husband's guide, philosopher and friend Also, the keeper of his conscience and the guardian of his morals Your mission in life is to hold onto your ideals with one hand—and onto him with the other

• • •

Don't try to "reform" your husband. A man does not marry in order to acquire a "keeper" and a life-critic, but in order to acquire an admirer. Cut out the missionary work. No man loves his guardian.

• • •

Never go away for a summer vacation and leave your husband lying around loose, where the blondes, the love-moths and the love-pirates can get him.

• • •

An ounce of matrimonial vacation is better than a pound of divorce, my dear. A little summer parting has held many a couple together

• • •

Try to join in all your husband's amusements pastimes and interests Never let him learn to take his pleasures with others.

• • •

For the love of liberty, let your husband take his amusements in his own way and with his own friends. Don't chain him to your side, or he'll soon get a blonde and a file—and break the chain!

• • •

Twelve good rules! Six of one—and a half a dozen of the other!

• • •

Treat Your Eyes Fairly; Avoid All Strain

By DR. COPELAND.

"EYE-STRAIN" is a frequently used expression. As a matter of fact it is usually nothing more or less than muscular weakness, the direct result of excessive strain

Dr. Copeland

Movements of the eyeball are controlled by groups of muscles. Like all the other muscles of the body, these will weaken if not properly nourished and given the proper care When one muscle of the eye weakens, more work is thrown on the other muscles.

This unexpected and unprepared for increase in work that a certain muscle must do is likely to result in discomfort. There may be severe pain

Persons engaged in occupations requiring excessive use of the eyes frequently complain of eye-strain. This is particularly true of stenographers, typists, moving picture operators, dressmakers manicurists and librarians.

Where the weakness is a temporary affair and has resulted only from excessive use of the eyes, the condition may be corrected by rest and eye exercises. When these simple measures do not cause the symptoms to disappear, it is advisable that proper glasses be prescribed. Glasses should always be worn if there is a real defect in vision.

It happens often, however, that the vision is perfect, yet there is muscular weakness. In these cases, glasses are prescribed, simple prisms perhaps, that serve to strengthen the muscles of the eye.

Fanchon Is Given Big Income

"WE CAN arrange for your signature later!" Mrs. Carstairs told her, "It is your allowance."

Fanchon stared at the check book. Money! Under false pretenses! But she had money of her own No, it was not hers. It was Tony's. She could not spend more of it, she must one day manage somehow to return it to him. Yet how could she, without ravelling the web of deceit which she had set herself to weave? Yet this money which was offered her was not her own, either

Nothing could make it so

"It is your allowance," said Mrs Carstairs again, "and will be paid quarterly

The deposit was $2500

Fanchon flushed and paled again

"But I can't—it is too much . . . I—" she stammered

Ten thousand dollars a year!

Mrs. Carstairs said gently,

"You will need pocket money And clothes. I am going to give myself the great pleasure of outfitting you, first, from head to feet. And after that, you may use your allowance as you see fit

She added

"I have more money than I can possibly spend Collin has his own income. His father's fortune was divided between us and has more than doubled. Collin has a seat on the Stock Exchange as well and is doing famously. I have always felt that . . . that I owed you something. You see, while the estate left by your grandparents was not large, it all came to me. Half of it should have been your mother's. I shall never forgive myself," she said low. "and May never forgave me

Fanchon said, low, desperately anxious to help by some word of comfort

"I am sure she did "

Mrs Carstairs eyes lighted

"Do you believe that? You don't know how happy you have made me! But I will not let you talk any more" She moved to the bedside table and took up the thermos jug which stood there, poured out a glass of water, shook one of the sleeping powders into it and gave it into Fanchon's hand "Drink that. Doctor's orders'" she said smiling, "and if, in two hours you are not sleeping you may have another. If you wish anything in the night, ring for Emma. She is sleeping next door to be near you But I and not she, will tuck you in now,"

She drew a sheet and a light blanket over Fanchon, and took the negligee from her shoulders. "Lie down," she said, and stooping, kissed her. Fanchon held her tightly for a minute. In another moment the lights were out and the cool breeze swept gently into the room and stirred the curtains

"I only want your happiness," said Mrs. Carstairs, oddly from the door. "I have made it my business, Evelyn "

Two hours later Fanchon snapped on the bedside light and took the second sleeping powder. Her brain was like a merry-go-round She lay and tossed in a sort of fever of despair. No going back now. And she didn't want to go back. Her whole heart had gone out to Jennie Carstairs. If she had been poor and obscure and miserable and still herself, Fanchon's heart would have gone out to her. Fanchon was perfectly unimpressed by all the ease and luxury. It fitted into the picture and that was all. It was the woman herself who had won her.

And she was an imposter

But Evelyn was dead. She could not hurt the dead. To confess now would be, she realized dully, to hurt the living tremendously

After a long time, she slept.

Emma brought her her tray after she woke. It seemed to Fanchon that the maid must have been listening at the door half the morning, for it was almost noon before she came in on the very heels of Fanchon's amazed awakening

Does College Degree Mark Man for Success?

By WINIFRED BLACK

Winifred Black

A college man in the White House.

College men on the bench in every court in the country.

A college man for mayor—in every town and city and village from Maine to California, and from Fargo, S. D., to New Orleans.

A college man for governor of Florida and for governor of Texas, and for governor of Iowa—that's the plan that is being boosted in the Federation of College Catholic Clubs of New York.

Did I hear anyone say rah, rah, whis, boom, bah?

Sounds good, doesn't it—for the college men?

But somehow it seems just the least mite impractical to me.

Now, we all know that some red-headed men are quick-witted, broad-minded, good-hearted, generous and honest.

And we all know that some red-headed men are stupid and mean and stingy and tricky?

Isn't it just the same with college men?

Does college really educate all the trickery and knavery out of a young fellow who starts in a trickster and a knave?

If it does, let's raise a fund and send every boy born in America to college, whether he has wit enough to spell his own name or not.

I know college men who don't know enough to go in when it rains. They never will know either.

Education is an excellent tool—and that's all.

Take a bright boy and a dull boy, educate the dull boy and let the bright boy get along the best he can.

By the time they're both thirty the bright boy will have his feet set on the ladder of success, in his own particular line, and the dull boy will have to have a lot more than a college education to shake his friends off the ladder.

All the books are not locked up in college libraries, and anyone who really wants to learn can read a few minutes once in a while, without some professor standing over him and telling him what's right and what's wrong

Brains, brains, brains—those are the three things that make success in life, and with them hand in hand, stepping along down the highway come character and character.

College men for policemen—can you beat it. Frederick, can you really?

Good Candy for Warm Weather

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

NOTHING RAISES the hair on the back of my neck quite so quickly as the suggestion that we have nothing to do in the Martha Lee kitchen all summer, because our classes are closed. Far be it from such! Not only do we carry on a regular routine of a correspondence that averages 40,000 letters a year, to say nothing of our daily column and Monday page, but we plan the lessons for our groups of fall and winter classes, and test the recipes that are to be used in the school, unless, of course, they are old-time favorites that we've made many times

Martha Lee

Today was the day that we tried out some new caramel candy recipes, and the results were so good that I can't wait until school opens to tell you about them.

Caramels are a good summertime candy, and although the recipes sound a bit extravagant on account of the cream, a comparatively small amount of material makes a lot of candy, and is it good!

Firstly, stir the sugar and cream and corn sirup or other liquid together before putting it on the fire until the sugar does not grate against the side of the pan. Then bring it slowly to a boil, stirring constantly, but do not stir after the boiling process starts. Turn down the heat and let it boil slowly to the right temperature, which in summer is two degrees higher than the recipe calls for. Be sure not to beat the candy after it is cooked Just pour it into the pan and set away to chill. It cuts easily, and in summer should be wrapped in wax paper.

VANILLA CARAMELS

2 cups white sugar
5 ounces corn sirup
1½ cups medium cream
Few grains salt
1 tsp. vanilla.

This is a light colored caramel made with all white sugar. Cook sugar, corn sirup, salt and one half the cream to 230 deg. F., then add remaining cream and cook to 244 deg. F. Flavor and pour into an oiled pan. Three-quarters cup of sliced walnut meats adds delicious flavor to this recipe.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

P. S.—This is to remind you not to forget the $1000 in cash prizes that's offered for original recipes using Japanese Crab Meat. Drop a line to Martha Lee for full particulars.

PEACH CONSERVE

5½ lbs. peaches (weighed with stones).

GRAND HOTEL

By VICKI BAUM

"THAT'S SETTLED, then?" said Preysing. "There are one or two things to be seen to here tomorrow. We must have our passports in order. Then we could set off the day after. Are you glad to go to England?"

"Very," answered Flammchen. "Then I'll bring my little portable here tomorrow and I could take down any letters right away."

"And tonight—if you'd like it, I thought we might go to the theater. We must at any rate have a glass of wine to seal our contract."

"Tonight, too," said Flemmchen. "Very well, tonight, too." She blew her lock of hair aloft and dropped her extinguished cigarette end in the ash tray. She could hear the music from [illegible] Yellow Pavilion distinctly. One can't have everything, she thought. A thousand marks. New clothes. London, too, was not to be despised. "I must telephone to my sister," she said as she got up

Kringelein, motorist, flier and conqueror, went furiously on with the day on which he had begun to live, Perhaps he felt very like those stunt fliers who pass within an ace of death as they loop the loop. He had begun to throw himself head over and now he was whirled on in obedience to forces he could not control. To turn about would mean a crash, and so he had to go through with it—forwards, downwards, upwards, he could not tell whither, for his sense of direction was lost. He was a tiny hurtling comet that soon must burst into atoms

Once more Gaigern's car hummed along the Kaiserdamm, once more they were at the hub of modern Berlin. In front of the Sporthalle there was a black and compact throng. Kringelein had never seen anything so immense as the interior of the hall and never such a mass of people in one place. He made his way to his seat through an elbowing crowd, following Gaigern, who went on before like a tower. It was well to the front, close to the bare and brilliantly illuminated square patch on which the eyes of 14,000 people were concentrated. Gaigern went into many explanations, but Kringelein did not understand a word. He was afraid this time, too; for he could not endure the sight of blood and fighting and barbarity. He looked with alarmed amazement at the men of muscle as they stepped into the ring and took off their dressing gowns and exposed their hard flesh. He heard the stentorian voice of the announcer and clapped whenever everybody else clapped. If it gets too bad I shall look away, he thought in secret when the first round began. But, at first, it looked to him as if the two fine, sinewy fellows up there with their broken noses were only going to fool about. "They are playing like kittens," he said to himself, and smiled with relief. Gaigern, on the other hand, was now so intense and excited that Kringelein wondered. The hall was still and so were the boxers. Then, in the midst of the stillness, came the dull thud of leather-clad fists—and a thrill went through the hall from end to end and right up to the gallery, below the roof where a thousand faces loomed through the haze. More, thought Kringelein, for the sound of the blow filled him with a sweet and feverish satisfaction that quickly turned to hunger. The gong clanged in no time and men sprang over the ropes with jugs, chairs, sponges and towels. The boxers lay in their corners breathing hard. Their tongues hung out like the tongues of hunted animals. Water was sprinkled over them, but they were not allowed to drink even a mouthful. Some of the splashes even fell on Kringelein below, and he wiped the drops from his coat with awe and a wonderful sense of fellowship with the man in the corner nearest him. Gong. Immediately the square of light was cleared again for the fight.

The murmur of the spectators abruptly ceased and turned to rapt attention. Blow followed blow. Shouts from the gallery—then silence. Another solid punch. The first blood trickled down over the eyes of one of the two—and he laughed. The men mauled each other at close quarters. One reeled under a heavy right over the heart. Kringelein came upon his clenched fists in his coat pockets. They seemed to him like two hard inanimate objects he had found there. Gong. Again the corners of the ring were a turmoil of flapping towels and tapping and massaging hands. The bodies of the two now shone with sweat.

"Now we're getting to work at last said Gaigern just after the third round began. Kringelein shuddered slightly at this typically Gaigernian anticipation of stirring events.

The boxers above—he could not distinguish one from the other, for both had broken noses and it was only between the rounds that he sided with the man in the corner nearest him—now went for each other wildly. Then they clinched. "Break away," shouted 14,000 throats. Kringelein shouted too. They ought to fight—not dance!

"Blynx is groggy. He can't hold out much longer," Gaigern muttered, and he showed his strong teeth under his upper lip. Again and again the referee in his white silk shirt jumped in to part the two bleeding muscular bodies. Kringelein thought it very good-natured of them to let him. He fixed his eyes on the one who was "groggy." This man Blynx now had a blue swelling that hung like a plum over his right eye. His back and shoulders were smeared with blood, and sometimes, too, he spat out blood at the referee's feet. He held his head sunk low; this might be correct but it made an impression of great cowardice on the inexperienced Kringelein. Whenever this Blynx was hit hard Kringelein felt a vivid and bestial joy rise from the depths of his being. He could not see enough of it. He greeted every punch that landed with a little cry of relief and then with mouth open and head extended he waited for the next. Gong Interval. Round. Gong. Interval. Round. Interval. Round . . .

I'm No Flapper, Girl Writes Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Here's my story. I have known a boy for at least four years by sight, and I like him very much. I see him occasionally and he glances or smiles at me. I dress as nicely as possible, but hate cosmetics and flapper ways. My sister is just the opposite. She attracts attention but I don't. Do you think that's the reason he doesn't speak to me? I am old-fashioned and said to be different from anyone in the family—people consider me more sensible than my sister. My father is very strict and I am not allowed to go to shows, dances and etc. How could I get acquainted with this boy? I should like to have him for a pal.

OLD-FASHIONED GIRL.

Dear Girl—You are a very nice, sensible girl and I am sure that you will meet this young man some time. It isn't the proper thing to speak to a boy unless you know him. Let him find a way to be introduced to you. In the meantime, go out as much as possible and meet all the young people you can, both girls and boys. Learn to swim and play tennis, and whenever possible, invite young people to your home. I am sure that your father would approve of these good times for young people.

PALFREY SISTERS WIN FIRST MATCH AT LONGWOOD

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Dempsey Comes Back — Touches Come Heavy
Still Can Punch — Flournoy in Town
A New Marquard — Butler Kayos Rain

TIGER CAN STILL GET $100,000 PURSE

The heavyweight pack is wild and restless once more now that Jack Dempsey has hit the battle trail looking for human fodder for his savage left hook. From Portland, Ore., comes a news dispatch telling how 17,864 persons kicked in with $27,295.50 to see the old Tiger knock out two opponents.

There is still plenty of dynamite and gold in that Dempsey left hook. The wallop that made Dempsey the most popular fighter since the days of John L. Sullivan still possesses its old crushing power.

Dempsey's cut of the Portland show was $13,000, which should give him enough cash to pay a few legal retainers in his coming matrimonial skirmish with Estelle Taylor. Now that the former champion has proved he is still the greatest drawing card in the boxing game, he will have every promoter in the country seeking his services. He will be able to pick up $300,000 between now and next summer tipping over a flock of stumble bums.

Then if Dempsey wishes he can step to bat with Max Schmeling, Jack Sharkey or Primo Carnera and get $400,000 for his trouble. All of which will knock off plenty of his recent stock market and investment losses. The bird who declared the million-dollar gate in the boxing game is gone didn't reckon with Dempsey staging a comeback.

A smart fellow is Dempsey. He told me in Florida two years ago last February that he would never box Sharkey again as the latter hits too hard and moved around too fast on his feet. He added he refused to meet Gene Tunney in a 15-round bout in New York as he knew Gene had the style to lick him any time they started. He asserted that the only thing which would tempt him to let old iron mike breeze was a slow moving opponent. Jack knows his legs are gone and that he must win in three or four rounds or else take a shellacking.

Primo Carnera was made to order for Dempsey. This bout would have gone in at Chicago last summer if the Ambling Alp hadn't got into so many difficulties with the boxing authorities.

Dempsey may have an idea he can give Schmeling a pasting. The latter has a wide open style and always keeps going forward when in the ring. This is the only way he knows how to fight. Dempsey wouldn't have to chase him. He could stand in a corner and blaze away at the youthful German as he paraded to close quarters.

If Estelle Taylor clips Dempsey for half of his bank roll under the community property law of California, the Tiger will be hungry to catch up with a $400,000 purse. Even human money castles like John D. Rockefeller and Andy Mellon don't toss $400,000 touches aside these days.

Jim Mooney Hailed as a New Marquard

I have a red hot tip from my old pal, Jawn McGraw of the Giants, that he has found a successor to Rube Marquard in Jim Mooney, left-handed hurler who starred with Bridgeport during the past season. Mooney originally ate his strawberries and cream in Tennessee, where he was discovered by one of the numerous McGraw "right eyes." He was farmed out to Bridgeport, where he won almost as many ball games as Europe has war debts. He slipped back into a Giants' uniform, and just to prove he isn't a busher won three big league tilts in a row. Jim will toss around a few baseballs at Braves Field beginning next Monday. Maybe we'll go out and take a peek at him if we are not too busy trying to make one of those 140-yard [illegible] with a No. 8 iron.

Hughey Duffy, Red Sox scout, isn't keeping any secret of the fact that Bill Stumpf, new Sox outfielder secured from the Quincy club of the Three-I League, may be the missing link the Fenway flock needs to pound its way into the first division. Stumpf has been hitting the onion at a .350 clip. And they do say that it is base hits that win ball games. A couple of fellows named Ruth and Gehrig have proved this on numerous occasions.

During the past few years the Three-I League has sent up Wes Ferrell, Cleveland star; Joe Vosmik, also of Cleveland and the best rookie to come into the big show this season, and Chuck Klein, Phillies' slugger.

It has been so long since the fence at Fenway Park has been dented badly that we are rooting for Stumpf to come through

Frank Flournoy Answers a Few Questions

Frank Flournoy—Hello, Mr. Boston.

Mr. Boston—How old is Stanley Poreda? What's his nationality? Who has he licked? How does he fight? What is he going to do to Hunt Thursday night?

Frank Flournoy—Poreda is 22 years old, was born in Jersey of Polish parents. He is able to write and talk Polish, which may and then again may not be a strong argument why he will be the next heavyweight champion of the world. He has licked Johnny Risko, Walter Cobb, Frankie Cauley and other good opposition. This Cauley is in the Tommy Loughran stable. He hasn't had as much ballyhoo as some of the other young heavyweights, but he's the real thing in the fistic line. Poreda can punch with both hands, also box. I look for him to knock Hunt bowlegged. They can then bring on any of the heavyweights. Eddie Mack can pick Poreda's opponents.

Mr. Boston—Do you think the boxing game is in as healthy a condition as it was when you were Tex Rickard's matchmaker at the New York Garden?

Frank Flournoy—Boxing is okay, but some of the matches offered have not been worth a dime a dozen. Give us some fighters who fight and it will not take long to get the rust off the turnstiles. In New York most of the theaters have been shut down. They were closed by poor shows rather than lack of public interest in good shows. Theater-goers are kicking in with $10 for seats at the new "Follies" and at the "Band Wagon." Wouldn't you pay tops to see Dempsey at his best in action again? Sure! Give 'em fights and everything will be okay.

Nat Butler, the big pedal and motorcycle man from Revere, has only been washed out by rain once this year. Nat was formerly known as the "Rain Man," as the skies always let loose a deluge whenever he had a bike race listed. Now that we have announced Nat's hoodoo is broken, let's hope it doesn't rain Saturday night when the International Cycling Derby is scheduled to be held.

SINCLAIR TO SELL RACE STABLE

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 26 (I'S) — The Rancocas stable, for many years recognized as one of the leading establishments on the American turf, will be sold.

Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate who owns the stable, made known his decision today to sell every horse in training next week.

The sale will mark one of the largest ever conducted in the history of the American turf. It will be held under the direction of C. J. Fitzgerald, head of the sales bureau of the Saratoga Racing Association, with George D. Bain as auctioneer. The date has been set for Thursday, Sept. 3, at the Saratoga paddock. At least 25 horses are to be disposed of.

While other reasons for Sinclair's decision were given in a statement issued by Fitzgerald, it is believed the ban placed on his stable by the Saratoga stewards after Ladana was poisoned, was responsible for Sinclair's decision.

The owner is said to be of the opinion that the stewards were most unjust in their action in the Ladana case. It is known he appealed to the leaders of the Jockey Club without results, and feels that both he and his trainer, Frank M. Taylor, were unjustly dealt with.

THE DAILY DOZEN

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

It's getting quite serious—this Jack Dempsey comeback. On Monday night the old Tiger knocked out two opponents in about a minute apiece. That's pretty good, even if his foes were only a couple of one-minute eggs.

It is reported that the Carnera board of managers is looking with troubled eye on the tour of the Manassa Mauler. Suppose Dempsey knocks out all the so-called set-ups? Who will the gondolier-footed one be able to fight? The only divers left soon will be trained seals.

There's magic still in the name of Dempsey. Nearly 18,000 paid $27,000 to see Jack in action. And when fans say it with money, that's talking loud in any language.

In Salem the other night, one boxer was knocked down 23 times in four rounds. After the fight, the fellow's manager said: "Those 23 knockdowns didn't hurt us a bit."

A referee in a wrestling bout recently, aroused by the apparent apathy of the principals, took on both men, just to show them how it was done after a fan in the crowd had asked for the next dance.

The same referee was unable to tell how the falls, which came eventually, were scored. He didn't know what holds were used in obtaining them. Our guess is that both wrestlers just fell down.

Stanley Poreda, who meets Babe Hunt here tomorrow night has none of the trade marks of the ring on his face. His ears and nose have not yet been pounded out of shape. His clever foot-work keeps him un-kissable . . . by his opponents.

Russell Boardman and John Polando, the boys who flew from New York to Turkey, have been invited to attend the Poreda-Hunt bout. But if they want to learn anything new in flying or in perfect three-point landings they should plan to attend a few wrestling shows.

The famous Tarahumara Indians of Mexico are training for the Olympics. But their specialty is long distance runs, anywhere from 100 to 300 miles. Too bad they are not citizens. The Democrats might find among them a suitable presidential candidate.

Boxing is said to have caused a decline in the popularity of bull fighting in Mexico. And we always thought bull fighting was a brutal sport. It must be a pastime for sissies, else the boxers in Mexico must really fight.

Cycling Derby at Revere Saturday

Al Letournier, Gerard DeBates, Franco Georgetti, Charley Jaeger, Franz Duelberg, Jimmy Walthour and Freddy Spencer, winner of the hour contest last week, start in the long grind.

The above quartet, vanguard of the new French Davis Cup team, were scheduled to come to Boston for the Longwood Cricket Club play this week, but they cancelled the date soon after they arrived in New York. "We're not ready yet," they stated. The National singles title play at Forest Hills is the goal of these four. Brugnon and Boussus are well known in this country. Merlin hopes to win fame this year. He should have plenty of trick shots at his command. That is, if names mean anything at all.

Ring Rust May Cause Defeat of Campolo

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

This Vittorio Campolo, who the boys call The South American Bean Pole, the Big Headache of the Argentine and a lot of other names, which show he must be something or somebody or he wouldn't be called names, and who crawls through the ropes against our Ernie Schaaf, the Big Blond of Wrentham, in Brooklyn, tonight, was the makings of a whale of a fighter a couple of years ago.

We may be wrong, but we think he was spoiled in the making, or rather mismaking. They pushed him to the front too soon, got him in a peck of managerial and promotorial troubles which brought him enforced idleness.

The enforced idleness let the rust gather on his fighting blade. It will be a ring rusty foeman who Ernie will fight, tonight, and if the Big Blond of Wrentham can't tie a few knots in the tail of the Big Steer of the Pampas then Schaaf will fade somewhat as a heavyweight threat and his rivals, Charlie Retzlaff and Steve Hamas, will steal the headlines.

When Campolo left the Avenido di Mayo of dear old Buenos Ayres and hit Broadway back in 1929 he was as rare a ring prospect as ever made a meal ticket searching manager water at the mouth. Veteran ring prospectors all declared there was gold in the Campolo hills.

A full inch taller than Carnera, not so thick set or muscle bound, more lithe, supple and free moving, broad shouldered, long and deep chested, strong backed and powerful arms, he was ideally equipped physically for the ring

And in his battle with Phil Scott in the same ring in which he will tackle Schaaf, tonight, the elongated son of the Pampas showed he was mentally and temperamentally equipped for a fighter also

Campolo Went 10 Rounds With Phil Scott

The Argentine novice went ten rounds with Phil Scott. That statement will cause some readers turn up their nose and query

"Well, what of it? That doesn't speak much for Campolo. Anybody who couldn't put as notorious a diver as Scott down for the count can't be considered much of a fighter."

Against a novice Phil Scott is a world beater. The English champion has speed galore, is a consummate boxer, a great timer and judge of distance, and packs a knockout punch. Against a trained and seasoned fighter Scott goes to pieces. But against a novice he is at his best. The Swooning Swan of Soho was at his best the night he faced Campolo in Brooklyn Scott isn't afraid of a novice When Phil isn't afraid he is a great fighter. And the Argentine novice fought him on even terms right up to the final bell.

The Scott fight made and broke Campolo. It made him as an attraction and broke him as a fighter. Managerial and promotorial disputes kept him idle, just when he should have been fighting and developing. One real fight in the ring, at the right time, is worth a hundred sparring bouts in the gym

He was matched to meet Sharkey and the match fell through and was cancelled at the last minute. The Big Steer of the Pampas has been browsing in the pastures of idleness ever since. The ring rusty Argentinian will be meeting a boxer whose fighting blade is whetted to razor sharpness at Ebbets Field, tonight. Everything is in Schaaf's favor

WARD SCORES HOLE-IN-ONE

Tim Ward of the Longmeadow Country Club of Lowell scored a hole in one today at Woodland, competing in the two-day open Ward scored his ace at the 11th hole, which is a 160-yarder.

He teed off with a No. 3 iron and the ball landed about six feet from the pin and trickled in

This is Ward's second hole-in-one, the first being made in 1925 at Longmeadow on the No. 2 hole. He also held the Longmeadow record for the course with 71 from 1925 to 1930

The Red Sox, rained out yesterday, conclude their final Western invasion of the season in a double-header with the Indians in Cleveland this afternoon. Manager John Collins will call up Jack Russell and Ed Durham to pitch, while Wes Ferrell and Clint Brown are down to throw 'em up for the fourth-place Peckmen.

The Sox can get an even break in the engagement as well as for the entire trip by capturing two verdicts today, they having won six and lost eight in the wide open spaces thus far.

The Fenway athletes climbed back into tie for sixth place during Tuesday's showers, as the Senators whipped the Tigers, and they also increased their lead to a full game over the last place White Sox, who were taken into camp by the Yanks.

Herb Pennock, veteran southpaw, did the pitching for the New Yorkers against the White Sox and shut the enemy out to become the first McCarthy flinger to turn in a scoreless performance all season.

Chick Hafey went hitless on his first three trips to the plate but when the Cards needed a long hit to tie the game, he came through with a double to score Bottomley in the ninth and he blasted what little hope the Tribe still had of winning out when he sent home the visitors' third and fourth runs with a single in the tenth.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Francis Ouimet and Jesse Guilford came into their own yesterday when they defeated Billy Burke, open champion of the United States and George Von Elm, 3 and 2 over the 36-hole route at Woodland.

It was one of the best played and most interesting exhibitions ever staged in New England. Burke and Von Elm are as serious during exhibition matches as they were during the recent U. S. open.

Guilford and Ouimet had a better ball of 69—64—133 against Burke and Von Elm's 66—69—135, while Ouimet was the low individual scorer with 70—69, two strokes better than Von Elm.

Although Ouimet was 69 in the afternoon, Guilford helped him five shots, which is a truly remarkable feat. Guilford's fours at the third and 14th holes, his threes at the eighth and 13th and his deuce at the 11th, knocked five strokes off Ouimet's individual round.

Until he played against him yesterday, Billy Burke had not only never met Francis Ouimet but had never seen him. Billy thought that Francis was an old man, according to his own confession, but after watching the Woodlander knock that agate around for 36 holes Billy admitted that he must still be a youngster

Burke and Von Elm are in Hartford today and will jump up to Springfield for another 18-hole exhibition tomorrow after which they will visit the Manchester, N. H., Country Club on Friday and play 36 holes against Jim Hendry and Harold Nute

Charlie Burgess, the veteran Woodland professional, did a fine job handling the large gallery, while acting as chief marshal yesterday

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Is it good practice to move your hips to the right, in the back swing, and to the left, in the forward swing? It is if you do it and play good golf. If you have good golf yet to master I would say to avoid this hip movement, which is called lateral hip action. Instead, stiffen the right leg and let your right hip move back, as the back swing progresses rather than out. Sometimes the beginner gets some results by moving the hips laterally, but later he abandons the practice when his shots begin to approximate real golf shots. The idea in the forward swing, as I have mentioned heretofore, is to give the clubhead a throw diagonally outward, toward the right of the direction line. It would be difficult to do it and produce an accurate flight.

HIPS SHOULD ROTATE RATHER THAN SHIFT.

SUN Starves Your HAIR!

HOT sun and salt water dry your hair, make it snarl and sap your scalp of the very oils that nourish it. A frequent massage with Noonan's Hair Petrole will avoid this. Its pure, natural, petroleum oil not only softens the scalp and stimulates sluggish circulation but checks the growth of bacteria that cause dandruff and falling hair. Keeps the hair well groomed, too. Scented or non-scented, whichever you prefer.

Give your hair new life and lustre. Try a treatment twice a week at your barber's or hairdresser's

CAMPOLO IN LAST STAND AGAINST SCHAAF

ERNIE IS 2 TO 1 FAVORITE IN GO TONIGHT

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—Ponderous but powerful pugilism is in order at Ebbets Field tonight as Victorio Campolo, the huge Argentine heavyweight, meets Ernie Schaaf, slightly smaller battler from Boston, over the 12-round route. The bout probably will determine for Campolo whether his aspirations to advance as a heavyweight contender shall continue or end.

The Argentinean, one of Tex Rickard's last and least successful importations, is facing one of the strongest men he ever has met in the ring. Campolo is six feet seven inches in height and weighs 240 pounds.

Schaaf is well over the 200-pound mark and has, in addition, blossomed out as a strong puncher in his recent bouts. The fighters have displayed one fault in common—neither has shown much ability to think quickly in a crisis.

Schaaf's newly-discovered clout, which has brought him a string of victories, which include two knockout triumphs over Jimmy Maloney since he lost a decision to Tommy Loughran early last spring, has made Jack Sharkey's protege a 2 to 1 favorite.

FLYNN, SEIBEG IN MAT FRAY

Football Belongs to Us

By M. T. McSWEENEY

Professor Rudolph Altrocchi, head of the Italian Department of the University of California, has made a discovery that football, far from being an American form of British Rugby, is, in reality, an old Italian game.

Professor Altrocchi says that the people of Florence played a game similar in rules and equipment 400 years ago, the only difference being that there were 27 men on a side.

Has the professor found any raccoon coats? Has he found 40,000 empties on the site of the game?

Has he found megaphones used by cheer leaders? Or saxophones used by the band?

Has he found any traffic tie-ups? Or parts of police officers' uniforms?

Has he found any goal posts ripped up? Or any ticket speculators?

Until the professor produces these, we must patriotically resent any attempt to rob America of a game so typically her own that no nation under the sun could have another just like it.

Ouimet Best Amateur in Country--Von Elm

By BILL GRIMES

"According to my way of thinking, there are only five real players entered in the United States amateur championship, which starts next Monday at Beverly," declared George Von Elm, a former champion and the player who made Billy Burke famous by carrying him 72 extra holes at Inverness.

"And, allow me to make a prediction. If Francis Ouimet hits the ball next week in Chicago as he did here today, and he has the stamina to go through, he will be next amateur champion of the United States. I honestly believe that Francis is the best amateur in the country, after watching him hit his shots today for 36 holes."

"In the past Francis has been bad news for two holes and then he has faded. I understand from Charlie Burgess that Francis is 15 pounds heavier than he was at Merion and if such is the case, he must be in fine physical condition."

"Perkins has been priming himself to win the nationals all season. He is in fine shape and a superb player under any and all conditions. Charlie Kocsis, who knocked Ouimet out of the United States amateur championship last year at Merion, is another player who is worth wagering a bet on, as is Ross Somerville, the four time winner of the Canadian open amateur title.

"Lawson Little, from the Coast, is the fifth player, who in my opinion, has a chance to succeed Jones as the titleholder.

"I have been roundly panned for the statement I issued that there are only two amateurs in golf," continued Von Elm, "probably because I jokingly asked Billy Burke who the second was, as the first had slipped my memory."

Once Worth $300,000, Boxer Now Penniless

Tossing away a fortune of $300,000 earned with his fists in the ring, Pete Sarmiento, once a contender for the bantamweight and featherweight championships, [illegible] left today for Los Angeles for a job washing dishes at $18 a week. He is flat broke, except for carfare home and $10 to buy food en route.

The Filipino youth, now 28 years old, fought his last fight Monday night. He fell a knockout victim in three rounds with Eddie Shea, Chicago, striking the last crushing blow. At the height of his career Sarmiento was a sensational fighter. He fought often and for big purses, but he tossed his money about like handbills.

In one year Sarmiento earned $85,000, but allowed it to slip through his fingers. He loved to dress, buying $150 suits, three or four at a time. Twenty-dollar silk shirts by the dozen, with all accessories to match, both in splendor and in price. Automobiles two at a time. He refused to walk four blocks. It was always a taxicab with a healthy tip for the driver if one of his own cars was unavailable.

Whitey Eckwert, who trained Sarmiento from the time he landed in America in 1923, bought his ticket today and sent him on his way to join his wife and two children in Los Angeles. The sum of $245 which Sarmiento realized from his fight with Shea is going to her by letter.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J DELANEY

Foreign and coastwise vessels caught in the teeth of an east northeasterly gale started to come in yesterday and are expected to arrive today.

The outbound fleet held in port by the storm has started to move outward.

Severely buffeted by the storm the [illegible] lobster smack Hilda Violet came in with 12[illegible] live lobsters from St. Andrews, N B, riding the storm safely.

Navigating officers of the steamer Mexican of the American Hawaiian Line which came into Commonwealth Pier from Pacific coast ports reported severe weather, heavy fog and driving rain on the passage.

JESUITS SAIL

Boston College and Weston College faculty members of the Society of Jesus are booked to sail today on the steamer George Washington of the United States Lines. Rev. Stephen J. McCarthy, S J, Walter S[illegible], S J, and John A Mad[illegible], S J, make up the party that is traveling to St. Beuno's College, South Wales, England, for a year's study. An automobile tour of the Continent and wintering on the French Riviera are the plans of Mr and Mrs. Edwin Slater and family, including Rosalie June, Barabara Keith and Douglas Smith. John Gallant, local manufacturer, is also a passenger.

PROFITLESS TRIP—The [illegible] of the steam trawler Patrick J O'Hara became afoul of the propeller and she was towed to the Fish Pier by the 125-foot Coast Guard Patrol Boat Jackson yesterday. She left here Friday for the South Channel grounds. When she had only one set made the accident occurred. Her radio message for assistance was picked up by the Coast Guard Cutter Active which relayed it to the Jackson. The Jackson made contact Sunday night, taking the trawler in tow to Boston. The northeasterly gale cut down her progress. She reached here without mishap.

MACKEREL GOOD—Mackerel seiners recepted almost one-half million pounds at the Fish Pier yesterday. The fish are running strong off the Maine coast at Monhegan and Matinicus. Wholesale prices are quoted at 6 to [illegible] cents a pound.

BETHEL PLEADS—Pleading guilty to charges of negligence but not guilty to charges of unskillfulness, Capt. Cecil Bethel, of Winthrop, who was in command of the Diesel tug Trimount, which was sunk after collision with the passenger steamer New York, with the loss of three of the tug's crew, will know the decision of the United States local inspectors of steam vessels soon. He appeared before Capt. Charles M. Lyons and Inspector John Stewart.

—SPECTATOR— Says:

The market again seems to have fallen into a rut from which it will take some important news to lift it out. The bulls have been somewhat discouraged by their inability to attract a following, but aren't likely to give up the "ghost" without at least another try. A trading market is still in view, but you've got to keep on watching your step.

The Oils

Decision of the government to investigate the Jersey-California and Sinclair oil mergers may temporarily restrict speculation in the oils. On the other hand, it is questionable whether the interests behind the consolidations would have gone ahead if they expected trouble. The industry also has the spectacle of rising crude and gasoline prices and the big decline in production to stimulate it. It is understood that important groups, including some banks, have committed themselves to higher prices for oil stocks.

Further selling of the rails, influenced by the weakness in their bonds, continues to burden the market. While some disgusted holders are said to have been getting out, the selling here is not considered important.

Coca Cola

Weakness in Coca Cola is attributed to the fact that the soft drink industry is near the end of its best season. This has brought some selling into the group and will tend to discourage further speculation. Coca Cola, however, has the supporting factor of steadily rising earnings, splendid financial position, and the higher dividend rate established this year. There also is the possibility of a stock split in the next year or so if the company continues to forge ahead.

A good deal of the selling in American Can in the last few days is understood to have been for bear account.

Not Impressed

Informed interests in the Street do not consider the selling impressive. It is understood that there were some large offers of General Motors on the books, but that they quickly disappeared when real buying came in. Indications that some stocks are working into an oversold position also have been noted. Large holders of stocks continue to wait to see how things shape up in the next month before deciding to let it go, it is stated.

A good deal of the activity in Standard of California is understood to be due to a large operator up to recently identified with the bears. He has been a bull on this issue for some time.

"AGWI" Has Loss

NEW MEDICINE FOR INDUSTRY ACTS WELL

By FRANK H. MELOON

To paraphrase a popular advertisement they laughed when Joe Murray of Oklahoma sat down to play, but he evidently knew the possibilities of the local piano. The new medicine for over-production in the oil industry, known as the shot-gun shutdown, has acted well to date. Gov. Murray has been vindicated as to judgment by the speed with which posted oil prices jumped from the ridiculous figure of 10 cents a barrel to $1 a barrel.

* * *

Bonds are notoriously slower movers than stocks, hence there is much significance in the advance of bonds of some of the oils from 2 to 8 points since early August. The major advance was scored by a Phillips lien. Phillips was the first to post the $1 a barrel price for oil.

Allan M. Pope, executive vice-president of the First National-Old Colony Corp., has been nominated for the presidency of the Investment Bankers Assn. of America. The nomination, while equivalent to election, is subject to action at the annual convention which will be held next November. It has been several years since the presidency of the "I B A" has come to an official of a Boston corporation, although a few Bostonians are ex-presidents.

Jack Conway, who knows where all the boxers' funds are placed, declares Ernie Schaaf is putting his into "gilt edge" investments. Too bad the boxers keep their investment lists secret. They ought to publish them, like some of the investment trusts. Then we could see just how good they are. The investment trusts today are mostly taking depreciation on original investments about the same as the general run of those who bought when the market was higher.

* * *

Some "investors" today have a larger total in depreciation than in remaining equities. They may be excused for wondering if the "gilt edge" in their securities consists solely of what is embossed there by the American Bank Note Co. et als.

Bright spots in the day's financial news include the declaration by the New York Cotton Exchange Service that the decline in the use of cotton has come to an end. Present prices are seen as stimulating consumption. The big Radio City project continues to afford cheer, effecting the placing of an order for 20,000 cast iron radiators, the largest ever placed.

U. S. Steel Put Down at Opening

Prices Hold Steady in the Steel Trade

Not much improvement is seen in the steel and iron industry according to the mid-week report of the Iron Age and other authorities but prices are holding steady.

Oil Markets Show More Improvement

Best records in the business world are made in the gasoline and crude oil markets, where prices continue to stiffen. The weekly summary of crude oil production did not cover the period of governmental restriction in east Texas and therefore showed a gain of more than 100,000 barrels daily. Next week is expected to show a shrinkage of 800,000 barrels a day.

Standard Oils Are Well Bought

Standard Oils of California and New Jersey were well bought today at 40½ in anticipation of an early official statement relative to their merger. The oil group, as forecast here last week, continues a leading favorite.

General Motors Is Given Support

General Motors, which has been under fire for a week, today received better support around 36½ and Westinghouse at 63. There are still many who think General Motors will not earn its dividend in full this year. The short interest in Westinghouse is said still to be large.

New York Central Financing Certain

Uninterrupted selling of New York Central bespeaks the market's mind as to the outcome of the next dividend meeting. Aside from this, much concern is felt over the ability of the company to satisfactorily negotiate new financing under prevailing conditions. Substance for the belief that this matter is most urgent is found in a study of the road's balance sheet at the end of last June.

Study of Rail's Finances Made

Entering the current half year New York Central's outstanding debt showed an increase of $24,400,000 over six months earlier, while deferred liabilities were up $7,200,000. Current liabilities exceeded current assets by $1,700,000, in striking contrast to a $7,400,000 stronger asset position at the close of 1930. There was a reduction in profit and loss surplus of $12,000,000. Presumably the additional capital raised over the sum used for retiring the $50,000,000 Lake Shore maturity a few months ago was insufficient to prevent dipping into reserves to meet dividend requirements in the first six months.

United Aircraft Is on a High Basis

Cigarette Taxes Vs. Lower Prices

Expected introduction of a new cigarette retailing at 10 cents a package has led to some interesting discussion as to the possible margin of profits on the basis of present tax rates. The existing levy is $3 per thousand, or 6 cents on a package of 20 cigarettes. This leaves a margin of 4 cents to pay for manufacturing costs, including labor, packing, distribution, etc., and something for the retailer.

With the modernization of machinery, students of accounting figure the manufacturer can sell the new product for a smaller profit than most of the other "makes" since it does not plan any advertising in connection with its marketing program.

Woolworth Not Far from Peak

Despite the recent setback, Woolworth is not far from its peak price, which represented the best level in two years. The stock receives strong support and on every display of firmness in the general list the pool in Woolworth advances its favorite. They have always in the background the probability of directors voting the long-expected special disbursement to stockholders.

PRICE CHANGES ARE NARROW IN BOSTON

Price changes were narrow in today's trading on the Boston Stock Exchange. Numerous issues were turned over unchanged.

Kreuger & Toll was forced off fractionally to record a new low for the year. Utilities Hydro eased a fraction to record a new 1931 low.

New Haven was up fractionally. Brown & Co. preferred dropped a point. Boston & Maine prior preferred dipped a minor fraction to its previous low. Gillette and Torrington gave up fractions.

Directors of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. will meet for dividend action next month. Date has not been set.

State of Maine awarded $2,000,000 3½ per cent highway and bridge bonds due in one to 20 years to a syndicate headed by International Manhattan Co. at 100.33.

Electric Output Is Above Last Week's

Production of electricity in the United States for week ended August 22 totaled 1,643,229,000 kilowatt hours, decrease of 2.8 per cent from like period last year, the National Electric Light Association reports. Output was slightly better than that of the preceding week, when a drop of 2.9 per cent from last year was reported.

Otis Steel Shows Quarterly Net Loss

New York, Aug. 26—Otis Steel Co. reports for quarter ended June 30 net loss of $269,784. In June quarter of 1930 the company reported profit of $834,673. Six months' net loss was $249,169 after charges and depreciation.

—STATE ST.— Hears:

That with a large part of the trading and brokerage fraternity standing on the sidelines, the bears are finding it hard to attract a following. When the unfavorable items now thought to be pending are cleared up the market should indulge in at least a technical rally. One observer feels accumulation can take place as the lows of last Friday are reached. It will be best to stick to those shares that seem to have turned the corner, such as the oils and store stocks.

Bond Market

While the bond department has been reporting steady losses day after day few brokers have given any thought to the possibility of a selling climax. Yet, there is a better than even chance affairs in this section are as bad as they will get. Especially is this so when the carrier liens are studied. Many are selling on a bankruptcy basis and poor earnings or not it is doubtful if the rails are going out of business.

As usual, the brokers with sufficient courage to give buying advice recommend commitments be protected with stops. Some traders question the wisdom of close stops, but in a market such as this it is better to have accounts safeguarded before rather than after the appearance of unexpected adverse news.

Gulf Oil

When conditions favor the resumption of constructive activities and sponsors of the oils have an opportunity to make a real showing with their favorites it is expected Gulf Oil, on the curb, will give a good account of itself. Not only is the company one of the important units in the industry but it has the advantage of being known as Mellon stock.

An important point to keep in mind when weighing the oils is their position in regard to inventories, now that the long decline in crude prices has been arrested. The current quarter is likely to be the first in many that the oils will be spared the embarrassment of writing off huge losses because of inventory depreciation.

Boardroom Briefs

The "Street" is hearing many tips; in fact, almost too many . . . Case and Radio are said to be in line for higher prices . . . Most bulls think upside will be gradual affair, unmarked by fast moves that might prove upsetting . . . The dairy and soft drink seasons are almost over and traders are ready to switch to other issues . . . Consensus of opinion is that the market has not acted too badly when the unfavorable items of past few days are totalled.

CURB MARKET TONE FIRMS

New York, Aug. 26—The curb market firmed today. Trading was so sluggish that the ticker tape was stationary most of the time, and the prices changes were in the main limited to minor fractions.

American Gas and Electric slid back more than a point, then regained part of its loss. Electric Bond & Share ruled fractionally higher during much of the trading. Middle West Utilities was steady.

Aluminum Co. slipped back more than a point, then rallied to show a slight gain. Pan American Airways worked a little higher. Crocker Wheeler was firm, but quiet. New Jersey Zinc appeared on the tape a point or so below the last time it traded. Gamewell preferred dropped a few points to around the year's low.

Dividends

* * *

Trustees of Boston Elevated declared quarterly dividend rental of $1.25 a share on the common stock, initial declaration at the $5 rate under the Public Control bill. The stock had been on a $6 basis, but under the new act, which provided for retirement of the preferred stocks by sale of 6 per cent bonds to the Metropolitan Transit District, the dividend was reduced to $5 annually, guaranteed at least for the next 28 years.

* * *

International Silver Company today declared the regular 1¾ per cent, dividend on the preferred stock, payable on October 1 to stockholders of record September 14.

Dividend Is Omitted

STOCKS DRIFT IN VERY DULL DEALINGS

Midweek business statistics failed to provide a beacon in the murk surrounding the financial markets and trading was all but abandoned.

A hopeful glimmer or two came in the strength of sterling exchange, and the more cheerful feeling in the London market.

ACTION OF SHARES.

The completely sold out appearance of the share market has been reassuring this week, but convincing signs as to which way it will break out of its narrow trading rut have been lacking.

Share prices sagged a little at the opening, stiffened during the late morning and eased off slightly after mid-day, with the bulk of the so-called pivotal issues showing negligible changes from yesterday's final prices.

Chemicals firmed up somewhat, possibly reflecting the revival of the European nitrate cartel. Allied rose nearly three points, and others a point or so.

Such stocks as U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone and New York Central sagged about a point, then recovered. American Tobacco "B" rallied a point, then fell back to show a loss of a couple of points.

In the rails, New Haven sold up 2 points, then rea ted. Norfolk and Western lost 4. Tidewater Associated preferred lost several points.

The freight carloadings reports have been scanned very closely of late for any advance signals of the autumn upturn in general trade. Today's figures, covering the week ended Aug. 15, showed a gain of roughly 8000 car from the previous week, but this was somewhat less than the usual upturn for that week.

A moderate gain in carloadings is usually expecter between the middle of July and the middle of August, but the total of 742,736 cars for the week ended Aug. 15 was approximately 1,000 cars under the week end July 18, and only about 1000 cars above the week ended July 25.

STEEL REVIEWS DIFFER

The weekly steel trade reviews continue to report negligible changes in ingot output. Iron Age placed it at 31 per cent of capacity, against 32 a week ago, and said steel demand still fails to foreshadow a seasonal rise in production.

The publication, Steel, also reported a slight sag in ingot output, but was a little more cheerful, saying this relapse has not blighted sentiment appreciably. It reported a little better inquiry for structural steel and railroad equipment, and said the automobile makers were emerging from their vacation season.

"Steel's comment on wages was interesting, in view of recent rumors on the subject. It said opinion in the iron and steel industry is that wage rates can be no more immune to reduction than dividends and salaries have been, and more inquiry on the subject is under way, but any immediate action does not appear probable.

It adds that the extent of the autumn recovery and the effects of recent salary reductions must be gauged before anything is done about wages.

American Petroleum Institutes weekly figures on crude oil production, showing a gain of 109,750 barrels in daily average output, was somewhat confusing, since it included only the first few days of the East Texas closing and during the last few days there was a desperate effort to get out as much oil as possible.

Gasoline in storage declined during the week roughly 500,000 barrels, or at a somewhat slower rate than during several recent weeks. The advance in oil shares in the stock market has been checked, pending a clearer indication as to the probable working of the new Texas conservation law.

CAR LOADINGS UP FOR WEEK

Loadings of revenue freight for the week ended August 15 totaled 742,736 cars, the car service division of the American Railway Association announces. This war an increase of 7956 cars over the preceding week and a decrease of 180,087 cars from the same week last week and 359,831 cars under the same week two years ago.

Miscellaneous freight loadings for the week totaled 283,107 cars, an increase of 2840 cars from the preceding week, but 77,594 cars under the same week in 1930 and 158,970 cars under the same week in 1929.

Loadings of revenue freight for 33 weeks totaled 24,145,560 cars, against 29,502,947 the corresponding period last year, decrease of 18.1 per cent, and 33,077,671 in corresponding period in 1929, reduction of 27.8 per cent.

Rail Bonds Lower With New Selling

New York, Aug. 26—The bond market see-sawed today. Railroad issues resumed their downward trend, especially bonds of speculative rating, and a number of new low levels appeared. Foreign obligations were moderately active, but their action was highly irregular. British 5½s of 1937 made further recoveries on a large volume. The 6s of October, 1960, of the German Central Agricultural Bank gained fractions.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquirics with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

LOEW'S

N. L. K., Scituate—I would like to have your opinion of Loew's.

Ans.—Throughout recent markets there seemingly has been a most persistent demand for Loew's stock. Some of the buying is reported to have been for financial interests behind another leading motion picture enterprise, although this may be but gossip of the market.

The fact remains that Loew's still ranks among the best of the industry's market representatives. The company has been excellently managed, as displayed in the estimates that earnings for the present fiscal year may approximate $7 a share. With this earnings power exhibited in a poor year for the business as a whole, the dividend of $3 seems not only safe but entitled to possible increase.

Market sentiment toward the entire motion picture group has recently undergone some change for the better, although it is universally admitted that certain units still face difficult times. However, the season favors more friendly feeling toward the picture stocks, since attendance at theaters naturally increases with the change in weather. In the development of any aggressive bull sponsorship for the motion picture group, Loew's should be among the principal beneficiaries.

ADVICE FOR FRIEND

C. B., Boston—While living in New York I had splendid advice from you. Now I want assistance on the investment of $11,000 for a friend, the widow of a doctor. This money comes from a life insurance policy and she wants as much income as will be consistent with sound investment practice.

Ans.—The best place for $2000 of your friend's fund is in the savings bank. Then she can draw on it, should emergencies arise, and not be forced to sacrifice good securities to obtain cash. For approximately $9000 she could get $2000 each Title Guarantee & Trust 5s, Lawyers' Title & Guaranty 5s, and Morris Plan 5s, ten shares each North American Edison preferred, West Penn Electric 6 per cent preferred and fifteen Standard Gas & Electric $4 preferred. The combined annual income from this list is $480.

DECLINE IN NET

M. L., Brookline—I own twenty-five shares Great Northern Railway preferred, bought at higher levels when the rate was $5. Is is worth retaining?

Ans.—You are still getting dividends from Great Northern Railway preferred, though the annual rate was cut to $4 a share August 1 from $5 paid from 1924. Earnings have been unfavorably affected by the prolonged business depression. Net operating income for six months ended June 30 showed a decline of $1,142,036 from similar period in 1930. In 1930 net was $7.24 a share, against $10.31 in 1929.

A LONG RECORD

D. W., Arlington—My bank suggests the purchase of American Telephone & Telegraph at present levels. Is it a good investment?

Ans.—American Telephone & Telegraph has an uninterrupted dividend record dating back more than forty-eight years. The yield from the current $9 rate, paid from third quarter of 1921, is a bit more than 5 per cent. Unless business takes a drastic turn downward the company should have little difficulty in covering dividends. Net for six months ended June 30 was $4.89 a share; in full year 1930, $10.40; in 1929, $12.67. What proportion of your cash surplus would you put into the stock?

TWO STOCKS

J. W., Brighton—I have fifteen shares Du Pont at 111 and ten American Can at 130. What do you think of them?

Ans.—It would be useless for us to comment on the market position of either stock, if that is what you mean. American Can appears to be earning the current $4 dividend. Sales so far this year are said to be about 8 per cent below 1930, but in that year earnings were $8.08 a share, and in 1929, $8.02. Regular dividends have been paid from 1923. Whether Du year is another question. Unofficial estimate of Pont will be able to cover the current $4 rate this earnings is around $4.40 a share. Net for six months ended June 30 was $2.23 a share; in similar period of 1930, $2.84 and in the full year $4.59. The stock still sells at a yield of about 5 per cent.

NOW IN STOCK

J. L., Cambridge—I have 25 shares Paramount-Publix at 48. What do you think of it?

Ans.—We do not care to discuss the market position, if that is what you mean. Though Paramount-Publix has paid cash dividends in varying amounts from 1920, the September 30 quarterly payment will be 2½ per cent in stock, or 1-40th of a share of common stock for each share held. June 27 the annual rate was cut to $2.50 a share, against $4 paid from March, 1930. Earnings for six months ended June 30 were $1.82 a share, against $2.98 for similar period in 1930. In that year net was $6.15 a share, contrasted with $5.79 in 1929. Under present conditions the stock is a speculation.

Menace of British Dole Is Revealed by Forbes

By B. C. FORBES

New York Aug. 26—Britain will pull through.

How grave her condition has become is revealed by resort to the war-time emergency expedient of forming of a Government, a Ministry, not of one political party but of all three parties.

B. C. Forbes

The one thing which more than any other has caused the overthrow of the Labor Government is the dole and the havoc it has played with Britain's national finance.

The fact is of special interest to our own country seeing that political proposals that we adopt the dole here are being made and are likely to be brought aggressively forward at the next session of Congress.

* * *

For everything under the sun there is a reason, though we cannot always put our finger on the reason.

There was a reason, a very powerful reason, for the starting of the dole in Britain.

When the flower of British manhood returned from the World War, it was found impossible to provide them with employment. In pre-war times the British working classes were rather docile. Their forefathers had submitted to the over lordship of the moneyed classes. They themselves inherited a disposition to accept the place allotted to them.

* * *

War wrought a revolution in the attitude of many, many of those who bore the brunt of it in the trenches. They returned home conscious that they had saved the nation. They were heroes, and they demanded to be treated like heroes. They had been told that they were fighting a war to end war, a war to make the world safe for democracy. They had seen revolutions achieved in other countries through the uprising of the masses against their rulers.

And they were determined to have a large share of democracy in their own country. They had become accustomed to fighting, and they were prepared, if need be, to fight for a larger share than formerly granted them of the comforts of life.

* * *

So, when the unleashed army could not find work, they let the powers that be know very emphatically that they did not propose to be subjected to starvation or hardship simply because the country was not able to give them jobs.

They presented this ultimatum to the Government: Give us work or give us support.

We in America and other lands did not hear so very much about what was actually going on under the surface in Britain. The ultimatum was not drawn up and formally presented to the Government with elaborate ceremony.

The ultimatum was written in the hearts of the masses rather than on parchment. That made it no less real, no less grave, no less menacing.

* * *

They decided that the hour had come to institute Governmental hand-outs on a colossal scale.

* * *

That was the genesis of the dole. It was expected to be only temporary, an emergency measure to cope with a crisis, a threatened revolution.

* * *

But Britain found herself unable to win back pre-war prosperity. She had been saddled with a national debt larger than any ever before borne. Her world markets had been shot to pieces. Crushing taxation had to be met. Wages had risen tremendously. British capital had been seriously dissipated. The United States has displaced Britain as the strongest financial nation in the world. The United States, too had passed Britain in the science of industrial management and in invention.

Instead of being able to reinstate war-bred idle workers, Britain encountered one setback after another which prolonged unemployment on a staggering scale. Socialism spread. The Labor party, inconsequential before the war, became the dominant party. Labor ascended the seat of government. That insured continuance of the dole and other action favoring labor but sapping capital and the nation's economic strength.

* * *

Now has come the day of reckoning.

A commission named by Ramsey MacDonald's own Government recently recommended retrenchment which included cutting down the dole. The Socialistic wing of his party noisily protested against carrying such action into effect; the less radical of his own followers joined with the Conservative party, almost as strong numerically in Parliament as Labor, in insisting upon drastic economies. The dole, which averted threatened revolution, now theratened to bring on revolution.

(Copyright, 1931, for the Boston Evening American.)

We don't know about that. But lunatics write them.

On the other hand, normal people have comparatively little trouble. And comparatively little fun.

HEARTS AND FLOWERS DEPARTMENT

(Rudy Vallee in Newspaper Article)

"Who am I to aspire to a 'perfect' girl, even if such a phenomenon existed? Certainly I am very far from perfect."

Let-the-Punishment-Fit-the-Crime Department—

1—Let Emanuel, instead of El Duce's children, pull Mussolini's ear on the Premier's birthday.

3—Let the husbands wear beach pajamas and make the wives carry the picnic baskets.

"While they're fixing over the Statue of Liberty," says Genevieve, the kitchen cynic, "they ought to arrange to have her holding an empty ginger ale bottle."

Q. and A. Department

Dear Sympathetic Aunt A. Bella—Do you think it proper to pass out at a party given by strangers? —Curious.

—Aunt (Abybay) Bella.

EXCELSIOR!

The shades of night were falling fast,
When through the hotel swiftly passed
A gal with bottles packed in ice,
All labelled with the strange device—
"Excelsior!"

What kind of syrup, gentle dame,
Have you, and what's the brand, and name?
A smile then curled her crimson lips,
Replying as she shook her hips—
"Excelsior!"

Of what is't made and is it strong?
(The customers became a throng)
Her answer came back loud and long—
"Excelsior!"

—Sgt. Cy Johnson.

Simile—

Humiliated as an assistant director in Hollywood without a New York license plate on his car.

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

Why, Mr. President?

Why Not Improve Job Situation?

President Hoover has appointed a Commission headed by the competent Walter S. Gifford to deal with the problem of relief for the unemployed.

That gesture is good as far as it goes.

But why doesn't the President go further and do something to improve the job situation?

His present program deals only with the effects of depression, and IGNORES THE CAUSES.

Congress should be urged to authorize a Prosperity Loan of $5,000,000,000 for social reconstruction and the return of normal business.

This huge sum should be expended promptly on essential Federal public works, which ordinarily would be developed gradually over a period of years.

This program would redeem millions of unemployed from idleness, and would release new purchasing power which would stimulate trade on all sides.

The proposal is in accordance with modern economic thinking, which has come to regard capital expenditures as business stabilizers which should be expanded in times of depression and retarded in periods of boom.

Creative economists also urge the development of machinery for co-operative planning and co-ordination of the activities of private business enterprises.

When it does, the problem of unemployment will be to a large extent met.

The opportunity for statesmanship is to deal with the larger questions of economic stability, NOT WITH MERE CHARITY FOR THE CASUALTIES OF THE DEPRESSION.

The multitudes of unemployed in this country want jobs, NOT HANDOUTS.

Spend More Money

Don't save your money, SPEND IT!

That seems strange, coming from a banker, but it is SOUND ADVICE, and it comes from President Walter H. Bennett, of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, one of the biggest and best known of New York city's savings banks.

"The consumer's dollar is worth at least 16 per cent more in buying power today than in 1928.

"Our advice today is this: Keep on deposit all you should have as a reserve against emergencies. If that reserve is not yet large enough (it should be equal to at least six months' salary) add to it.

"But IF YOU HAVE A SURPLUS above all likely needs, make careful purchases of things you want for permanent use while prices remain low.

"Buy real estate if you are planning a home of your own. Land prices have not been so low in many years, and mortgage money for building can be had on very reasonable terms.

"Moreover, judicious spending now will help to set the wheels of industry turning more rapidly and restore employment to thousands now out of work."

Students' Airplanes

A modest and democratic spirit among students should be the aim in colleges as well as in schools. How to abolish swank has often troubled educators. They made a good start by insisting on gingham dresses, white and very simple, costing just $10 or so, to save anguish to those less endowed with riches.

Most high schools put their foot down on students coming in their own autos. It leads to heart-burning and rivalry, with the family purse getting wrecked so that Tom or Dorothy may keep another ten horse-power ahead of somebody else or show a lot more nickel and an extra nobby-tread.

Now the Ohio State University positively won't let students use airplanes at their sorority rushes. That's what tho young generation goes in for now, airplanes. Ohio fathers must sigh with relief. After equipping the debutante idea with a nifty $2000 airplane and paying the bill it comes hard to have her sob that a classmate has a new one costing $6000. And she really must keep up!

Good Slogan to Remember

"Honesty is the best policy."

We had supposed it originated with Cervantes, in the seventeenth century, and was popularized in this country not by Washington but by Benjamin Franklin.

What George Washington said was:

"Beware of foreign entangling alliances."

Too bad there aren't more real Americans who can remember THAT and profit by it.

Easy to Criticize

Calvin Coolidge said recently:

"Nothing more execrable, if bad."

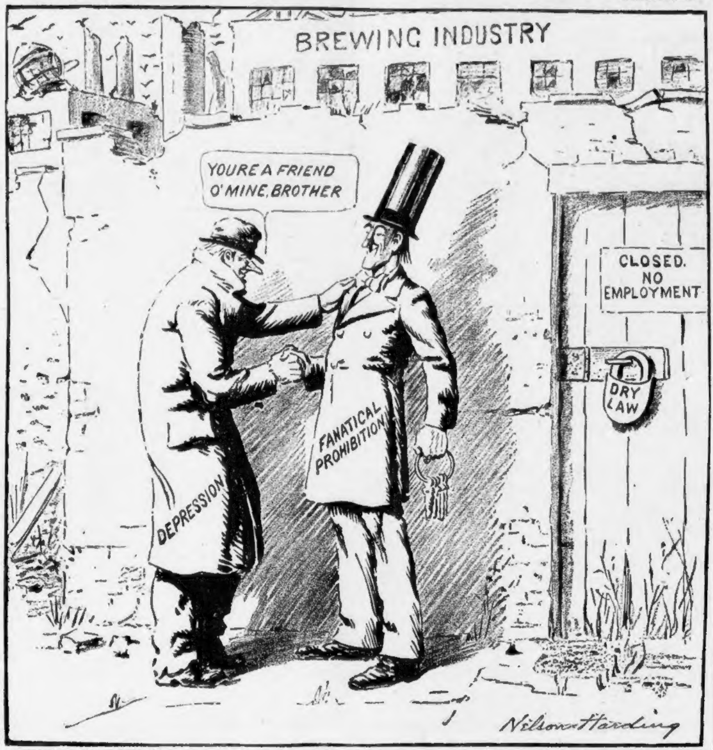
Do the day's work. If it satisfies YOU, don't mind what the other fellow says.

"Shake"

By NELSON HARDING



Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Only One Morning

THAT BREAD your mother used to make, John—

You've never forgotten it, have you?

The memory of it makes all other bread taste like sawdust. Queer how strongly you can see the picture of her bending over the old kitchen table, after all these years — smell the buttery brown crust — feel the warmth of the big wood stove welcoming you, as you raced in, cold and hungry, after school!

Elsie Robinson

Makes a lump come to your throat to even think of it, doesn't it, John? And many a time you catch yourself wondering how life would have been if you'd stayed there, with mother and dad, and had never left the old home. The missus? Yes, she's a good woman. But somehow she's never understood you, the way your mother did . . . never knew how to make a place homey and cosey. Oh, well—

And you, Alice?

Remember that sweetheart you had the year you graduated from High—your first serious love affair? As if you could forget him! You've had many a sweetheart since . . . been married a score of years and now your youngsters have sweethearts of their own. But you dream of Al yet. Find yourself comparing him with Tom. Could he ever have become as dull and uninteresting as Tom? Would you have grown as faded and fat if you'd been Mrs. Lester instead of Mrs. Brown?

The bread your mother used to make. The dream of your first sweetheart. How the memory of them persists . . . spoiling, somehow, all the bread, all the love, that has come since.

AND YOU THINK IT WAS BECAUSE THAT BREAD WAS BETTER . . . BECAUSE THE SWEETHEART WAS MORE GLORIOUS THAN OTHER MEN—

You're wrong. Chances are, John, that your mother's bread was just so-so, and you've tasted a thousand better loaves since. And it's dollars to doughnuts, Alice, that your hero was just a regular kid and you'd never give him a second look if you saw him for the first time now. Then why has their memory persisted? BECAUSE IT WAS PART OF YOUR MORNING.

You do not remember the taste of your mother's bread, John. You remember the flavor of youth. You do not remember the sweetness of first love, Alice. You remember the care-free glory and glamour of 18-year-old romance. And it will never come again, for there is only one morning.

But what of it? Why let the memory of that youthful yesterday spoil all your tomorrows? There is, it is true, only one morning. BUT HOW ABOUT THE NOON? Dewy dreams are rarely sweet, but why pass up life for the sake of a dream? What of the wide adventures, the long marches, the gallant battles that may be yours if you'll snap out of your dreams and get going?

Why has life been such a disappointing mess, John and Alice? Why have you never regained your lost happiness? WAS IT BECAUSE YOU WERE TRYING TO HANG ON TO YOUR MORNING? WAS IT BECAUSE YOU WEREN'T WILLING TO SEEK NEW HAPPINESS?

WAS IT BECAUSE YOU WERE A COUPLE OF BIG CRY-BABIES WHO WEREN'T WILLING TO GROW UP?

New York Day by Day

Michael Arlen

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—Debonaire Michael Arlen, flashing so vividly on the literary horizon, is reported back tracking as suddenly into the obscurity from whence he came. The roar of the crowd falls on deaf ears. Instead of the literary lion he is becoming the literary hermit.

In the beginning he was an unknown young Armenian with an unprounceable name who plopped like a sky rocket out of the nowhere. Over night he became the dapper historian of Mayfair, gazing at the dazzling social whirl of London through rose colored glasses.

More than any writer of his time he created something new—something facinatingly bizarre. His first novels became immediate best sellers. Chesterton, Belloc and Bennett hailed him. An American cigar, a Paris cocktail and an Italian hat were named for him. Along the Riviera he was the white-haired boy.

He came to New York while two of his plays were running simultaneously and successfully on Broadway. He moved on to Hollywood where he was feted by the movie crowd. From there he went back to London, then joined the social set at St. Moritz and married a beautiful Grecian princess.

In a brief space he flushed out most all of the honors that come to a writing man in the course of a lifetime. But on his last visit here Arlen had changed. While his furore had somewhat spent itself in America he was still the target of many luncheon and dinner invitations.

But shied away from all. Most of his short stay he kept to his hotel room, meeting old friends quietly. He was not seen at first nights. His flash clothes had softened to sombre hues—mostly plain black. He seemed fed up with frothy sophistications of life.

Those who know say he believes he has greater talents than first efforts revealed. He wants to take time and will spend three years preparing his next novel. He has the income from a carefully invested quarter of a million to indulge this leisure. And lives quietly at Antibes.

* * *

For some reason I am ill at ease among people who wear flannels and blazers and yesterday motoring on Long Island I stopped in a feigned effort to lace my shoe while passing a tally-ho party. H. N. Swanson's inferiority complex is taken for a ride when a group of habited riders gallop past in the park. Nothing makes him feel so much the groveling worm.

* * *

No square in New York has the summer mellowness of Mayor Walker's residential section St. Luke's Place. Tucked out of the beaten path it luxuriates in a sort of civic decay. There are no ornate apartment houses but instead three and four-storied dwelling houses with iron fences, small plots of grass, chirping birds and brick walks. In the center is a playground, usually joyous with childish shouts. Sprawled sunning themselves on the sidewalk are friendly unleashed and unmuzzled dogs. At night many windows glow with hanging oil lamps.

* * *

Around the corner from the Mayor's, Greenwich Village frolics. It has taken on a renewed spurt of hop-de-do lately. The Nut Club, with bilious colored stucco front and electric sign letters crazily hung, is at the moment the Village rendezvous. Hard-by is the triangled tea room of Ann Sutherland with tiny green awninged roof—seating perhaps 20. A glorified mirror owl lunch wagon, with a poetical banjoist, bids for trade in the area. Village food and entertainment are cheap and fit in with the present day purses, hence many haunts, so long facing bankruptcy, are now enjoying a puff of prosperity.

* * *

I notice, too, that The Black Cat is carrying on in the Village. It is a remembered spot during my first year in New York. At an adjoining table one night I was introduced to a man later to figure surprisingly in world history—Leon Trotzky. And it hived such characters as Tiny Tim and his tray of soul candy, Sonia, the beautiful cigarette girl from Minsk, and the troubadour, Bobbie Edwards, and his cigar box ukulele.

* * *

Someone on the phone — Don Clarke, I think—mentioned casually that they heard the biggest seasonal dress bill was Geraldine Farrar's for $100,000. Why it should inspire me later in the day upon dropping in at a shirtmaker's to order six extra shirts is a little deep. But I can account for it in no other way.

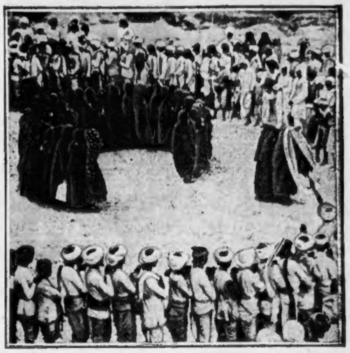
The Bhils Dance the Gurba

We in America Don't Dance. We Just WONDER.



LADIES AND GENTLEMEN DANCING THE GARASIA GURBA

These primitive, more than half savage creatures do not like civilization, especially the kind that the English brought to India, with its health rules, interference with ancient customs, such as marrying little girls seven and eight years old. And as civilization has advanced the Bhils have retreated into the forest.

Once a year they dance the dance of the "Garasia Gurba," which in some mysterious way is connected with a tribal division or allotment of land.

Their more peaceful Hindu neighbors, tired of being attacked by the Bhils, give them land to cultivate for themselves, and in return the Bhils kindly promise not to send marauding parties to rob and kill among them.

This "Garasia Gurba" dance is connected in some way with the problem of prosperity. A few women gather as you see, all covered in black, in a small circle and dance solemnly, while hundreds of men, packed closely together like the women, with their hands on each other's shoulders, dance as they circle around them.

The dance, occupying a space of several acres, is supposed to be pleasing to the gods that look on, and are fond of seeing Bhil men and women shuffling around in a remote corner of the small earth.

Before the depression of 1929 we might have looked with scorn upon the dance of the Bhils. We might have asked them: "Why don't you organize your industries, keep everybody at work at $5 a day or more, send your stocks kiting sky high? In other words, why don't you be prosperous, as we are?"

But things have changed and we cannot criticize the Bhils, for at least THEY DANCE, whereas we and our public men, just sit around and wonder what's the matter with us.

We wonder what caused the depression, what makes it LAST, why it BEGAN, when it will STOP, if ever?

The Bhils go out in the hot sun and dance until they are tired. They have the satisfaction of expressing their emotions, believe that they are pleasing their gods, and that the lands which they take from their neighbors by terrorism will be fruitful.

There may be something in their theory. Why not try it?

Since Congress and our magnificent ruling class cannot do anything better, why don't they go out and dance around the Washington Monument like the Bhils, a sort of Uncle Sam "Gurba Dance"? The Secretary of State or the Secretary of the Treasury could lead them with an umbrella.

It MIGHT cause prosperity to come back. In any case, it wouldn't do any harm—the dancers would get good exercise and the "Gurba" dance would cost less than the Farm Board and do no mischief.

Just Folks

Patience

The patient man who stands to care
And shrugs his shoulders now and then
At little hurts he has to bear

The patient man who bit by bit
Conquers where fretful men admit

The price of many goals is Time,
Plus willingness to work and wait.
Though courage oft is called sublime,
One must have patience to be great.

Steadfast of purpose he must be,
Who would some worthwhile goal attain.

Words of the Wise Men

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us, to the end, dare to do our duty as we understand it. —Lincoln.

But there are wanderers o'er Eternity.
